ORTY-THIRD YEAR. LINCOLN, NEBRASKA, THURSDAY, JUNE 19, 1924. TWO CENTS.

I. W. W. IS ACCUSED

CHARGED WITH DISEASE SPREAD

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—Members of the I. W. W. in many parts of the country are to be charged with responsibility for the spread of the hoof and mouth disease, epidemic in California, Grover J. Fink, United States attonrey announced today.

Wholesale roundup of I. W. W. members is to begin immediately he declared.

Two men have already been arrested here, Fink declared and a quantity of stickers and I. W. W. literature warning people to beware of California products because they might contract the disease have been seized, he said.

The announcement followed weeks of investigation by federal agents here.

Federal investigation of the hoof and mouth disease situation started when veterinarians became puzzled by the long distances the infection would jump—from central California into Los Angeles and then to some other far removed place, Fink explained.

He declared that this investigation led to the discovery that freight shipments from California were becoming marked mysteriously with stickers warning against the use of California products and spreading false reports as to the effect of the disease on human beings.

The I. W. W., Fink said, will be charged as fast as arrests are made, with interfering with interstate commerce.

FIND M'ADOO THE DEVOTED HUSBAND

Woman Journalist Collides With Probable Presidential Nominee, His Child By Hand.

By Dorothy Shumate.

NEW YORK, June 19.—"A little child shall lead them," but where?

This is the question which agitated New York yesterday as William Gibbs McAdoo, democratic candidate for the presidency, swung from the platform of the 3:30 B. & O. and plowed his way thru 3,000 excited supporters—on his shoulder sat his youngest daughter, directing the way.

"The 3:30 was ten minutes late and I dashed pp at 3:39.

"I ran along the platform broadcasting 'I'm looking for Mr. McAdoo. Andboyy seen him?'"

"Your search has ended," said a soft, genial voice, as I collided with a tall can carrying a child, almost with disaster to the child. Close behind came a sweet faced woman, another child leading the way. There could be no mistake here—she had the Wilson jaw. The fog cleared and behold here was the candidate whom women wil love, honor and obey—and his whole family.

But my story was moving and metropolitan police, delegates, standing committees were as nothing. From under the nose of a profound looking person (may've been the next president), I stole a taxi. "The Vanderbilt—quick."

In just twent yminutes I was sitting in the McAdoo apartment on the eighteenth floor.

Seventeen pieces of baggage and a basket of peaches, pineapples, bananas, etc. I counted 'em all. There were vases and vases of flowers, roses and blue snapdragons, plush furniture and tri-colored lights.

Mrs. McAdoo gave me a smile and murmured something about the children.

"Are you comfortable?"—here was the husband speaking. I found her later going thru the baggage.

"You know I really don't recognize the contents of any of these," she said. "I'm looking for the children's things and they seem to be gone."

So are the children, I thought. For theyhad been moved into the background immediately upon arrival.

The candidate today took his family to the summer home of Breckenridge Long, in Nantucket where they will remain during the convention.

Lumbermen Hold Meeting.

NEBRASKA CITY, June 19.—An organization meeting and banquet of the "Knothole" club, an association composed of lumbermen in this district, was held here Wednesday at the Overland cafe. This is the first get-together Don Critchfield, of Lincoln, was toastmaster. At the short business session problems of benefit to the organization, to farmers and to lumbermen at large, were discussed.

GOES TO INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

NEBRASKA CITY, June 19—Sheriff Ryder accompanied to Geneva Irene Peterson, of Lorton, who will enter the girls' state indusrtial school. The girl, who is but sixteen years old, was apprehended several weeks ago with an older sister and two men, who have had their hearings, in the Peterson home during the absence of the mother. The father is serving sentence in the Nebraska penitentiary. Since the trouble, the young woman has been employed as a domestic in a local home, but informed the officers that she did not wish to continue in that capacity.

BOOM FOR GOV. SWEET

Colorado Delegation Announces He Will Be Nominated For Vice President.

NEW YORK, June 19.—The first out and out vice presidential boom was dropped into the ranks of democratic national convention delegates here today when Morris Shafroth, chairman of the Colorado delegation, arrived in town announcing that Gov. William E. Sweet of Colorado would be nominated for second place on the ticket.

ANNOUNCE NEW COMPANY

To Segregate Manufacturing Departmen tand Organize Pullman Car Corporation.

CHICAGO, June 19.—Segregation of the manufacturing department and organization of the Pullman Car and Manufacturing corporation was announced today by the Pullman company.

The new company is capitalized at $50,000,000, the stock of which is held by the parent company. There will be no distribution of the stock or assets, it was announced.

Present Champion Battles To Finals

OMAHA, June 19.—Mrs. Russell Fowles, present champion, and Mrs. Mark Levings, Omaha, will play the final match in the Nebraska women's golf championship here tomorrow.

Mrs. Fowles won her way into the finals today by beating Mrs. W. G. Silver, 8 and 7, while Mrs. Levings defeated Mrs. John Redick, wife of the men's state champion, by the same score.

Mrs. Fowles was in magnificent form today and set a new record for women over the difficult country club course. She shot the first nine holes in 41 strokes. The old record was 43.

Indian Representative Dies.

WINNEBAGO, Neb., June 19.—James Ricehill, one of the most prominent of the older Winnebago Indians, is dead at the home of his sister, Mrs. Bighunder, here.

Ricehill, who was 65 years of age, was for many years a member of the Indian council and a leader among his tribe. He made frequent trips to Washington as a representative of the tribe on matters of importance and his voice in the councils was listened to with respect. Before his death he sent for his younger children at the Genoa Indian school to be with him during his last days.

HARRISON MAY BE DARK HORSE

NEW YORK, June 19.—Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi today took a practice gallop with the democratic "dark horses" being groomed as compromise candidates in event of a deadlock between William G McAdoo and Gov. Al Smith.

Harrison held a conference with George E Brennan, democratic boss of Illinois and leader of the anti-McAdoo forces, and Governor Smith

Democratic leaders and delegates everywhere have only kind words for the Mississippian, whose popularity with all factions of the party was responsible for his selection as the democratic "keynoter" The only point raised against the availability of Harrison in the event of a deadlock was his far southern residence His ability and all around fitness were conceded generally

He is a dry of Protestant faith, an orator of great ability and is well known to the voters. He will virtually write his own platform in his "keynote" speech

Harrison sprang into national prominence at the San Francisco convention in 1920 when he was floor leader for James Cox

With McAdoo and Smith in a hopeless deadlock, the Harrison boomers believe that a combination of the Smith-Cox-Underwood forces and a large draft on the "favorite sons" vote could put the Mississippian over.

SECOND CHILD THREATENED

IS THE TEN-YEAR-OLD FRIEND OF FRANKS BOY.

Child Mentioned By Leopold and Loeb in Kidnaping Designs Object of Threats By Unknown Man.

CHICAGO, June 19.—Police and private detectives today guarded the homes of wealthy residents of Ellis avenue ond the south side following the receipt of a ransom letter by Irvin H. Hartman, millionaire furniture dealer, threatening to kidnap Irvin jr., ten years old, unless $10,000 is paid. The Hartman home is within a block of the home of Robert Franks, the fourteen-year-old school boy kidnaped and slain by Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, millionaire youths.

Hartman reported to police that he had received a special delivery letter as the family were about to start dinner late yesterday threatening kidnaping if the money was not paid. The letter concluded with:

"Details will be given later."

A few moments later Hartman received a telephone call. A man's voice repeated the threat and ransom demand, Hartman said. The caller also stated he would communcate with Hartman later, and give directions for payment of the money.

Police are somewhat inclined to the theory that a crank sent the letter. Another theory is that some one is trying to capitilize the hysteria aroused by the Franks case and frighten Hartman into paying the money. A police guard is on duty at the Hartman home. Other homes in the neighborhood also are being guarded.

Irvin, jr., was one of the boys considered by Leopold and Loeb, in their hunt for a rich man's son to provide them with excitement before they finally selected Robert Franks, police said.

"The letter said to watch for a telephone call at 8 o'clock," Hartman said today. "But the call came about half hour earlier. The man told me to be careful to turn over the money to him and pointed out what had happened to Robert Franks.

Hartman said the man told him to wrap up $10,000 in bills, and directed him to a street on the west side.

"You will come to a picket fence, and the money is to be thrown over it," the man told him.

"I was furious and told him in strong terms what I thought of him. Then he hung up."

Irvin may be a witness in the trial of Loeb and Leopold for murder. He was the last to see Robert Franks alive. Irvin, a short distance behind Robert, stopped to look at a flower bed. When he looked up again Robert had disappeared, and an automobile that had been parked at the curb, was speeding away.

Police also are looking for the persons responsible for a flaming cross, put up within a short distance of the homes of Leopold and Loeb. The cross burned in a vacant lot opposite the home of Martin A. Ryerson, millionaire steel man.

Kidnaped or Injured.

Police made known the contents of the ransom letter. It told Hartman that unless the $10,000 was deposited at a designated spot on the Westide, his son would be kidnaped and perhaps seriously injured.

Other members of the family also were theratened.

The letter, signed "The Big Ten" stated plans were made long before the Franks killing to kidnap Irvin jr., and "if the money is not paid, neither you or your son will be safe on the streets of Chicago.

"If you don't think your son's life is worth that (10,000) don't pay heed to this letter. He will be a marked one and sooner or later he is going to get it."

Hartman was warned not to go to the police.

COWGILL AGAIN AT DESK

Army Does Not Object to His Holding Down Present Job On City Council.

The army attitude concerning Commissioner Cowgill is that it is perfectly right and proper for him to continue his present occupation as Lincoln councilman. He just returned from West Point where he helped celebrate the tenth reunion of his graduating class from the United States military academy.

"West Point prefers to have me in the public service during peace time," he said.

He draws $2,700 a year as a retired army officer and but $2,000 a year as councilman He was particularly interested in Newburgh, a city of 30,000 ten miles from West Point.

"They get 4 per cent on their city deposits," he said "They have a city manager and are satisfied The council meets at night."

He visited the common council of Poughkeepsie and the Dodge plant in Detroit. General Pershing, he said, was elected president of the association of graduates of the military academy.

BRENNAN WANTS VOTE EXTENDED

NEW YORK, June 19.—Political strategists of rival candidates for the democratic presidential nomination swung around among the leaders and early delegates today as the preliminaries for the big convention began to take form. Chief developments were these:

1—W. G. McAdoo held a conference with his convention lieutenants aimed to effect an early decision of the contest after balloting begins next week.

2—Friends of Governor Smith and William Randolph Hearst moved to bring a temporary truce in their personal quarrel so that there would be no rift in the Smith forces from New York. Smith would not discuss the move and Hearst was out of the city.

3—George Brennan had a luncheon conference with New York delegation leaders including Norman Mack, national committeeman, and J. J. Fitzgerald. Brennan is working to prolong the voting in belief it will weaken McAdoo. Also he advocates an anti-klan plan.

4—John W. Davis supporters opened up headquarters at the Waldorf and began a campaign to make the West Virginian the favorite "dark horse" of the convention. Judge John H. Holt of Huntington, a noted orator of West iVrginia, will nominate Davis and Mrs. Izetta Jewell Brown will second the nomination.

5—Dark horse fanciers also trotted out Senator Pat Harrison and Senator Carter Glass today, the latter coming in for some additional backing upon his arrival. He is for McAdoo first. Homer S. Cummings, former national committee chairman, disclaimed any booms launched in his behalf as a "dark horse" when he addressed a gathering of delegates in the first reception for them held thus far.

WEATHER BUREAU'S NEBRASKA REPORT

Crop Growing Was Given a Boost During the Week Ending June 17, the Survey Discloses.

Thomas A. Blair, meteorologist, has issued the following summary of weather and crop conditions in Nebraska for the week ending June 17: The past week was the best growing week of the season and the first with temperatures well above normal. Rainfall was abundent to excessive in most central and eastern counties, but was deficient in western and southwestern counties. As a result of the warm weather and frequent showers, corn made excellent progress, and small grains showed some improvement. All crops are still backward, however, from one to three weeks later than normal. The color of wheat and oats improved, but thier condition remained unsatisfactory. The cultivation of corn progressed satisfactorily except in the bottom lands along the Missouri and lower Platte rivers, where it was too wet and some fields were flooded. The stand is poor in many places. Alfalfa, pasturesand gardens showed improvement. Some local hail damage was reported in Cherry, Blaine and Webster counties.

The weekly rainfall:

FARM AND CITY PLANNING

Based On Same Principles, Dean F. W. Ives Tells Knife and Fork Club Members.

Dean F. W. Ives of Ohio state university, engineering department, addressed the Knife and Fork club Thursday noon on "The Relation of City and Country Planning." The two were based on the same principles, he said, and pleasant living conditions were no less important on the farm than in the city. Dean Ives made a special plea for tree planting on esthetic, practical and sentimental grounds, deploring the thoroness of settlers in the northwest who followed the lumberjacks and made a barren plain of former forest land. They are beginning to see the light now, he said, and are planting trees and shrubs.

There is no longer any excuse for a farmer's bringing up his family in a house like a dry goods box with a smaller box tacked on to one side, since excellent designs for small houses are to be had for the asking. Building a big barn first, on the principle that the barn will pay for the house, is all right, he said, so long as onedoesn't forget to build the house, or let it go until after the childrenhave grown up and left the home. Illustrating the social and sociological bearing of the house, he told of the farmer who heard a rural expert talk and then asked for a house plan with seven parlors, to give his seven daughters the chance they had never had. However, one parlor, a living room and dining room, with some porches did the work so well that in a few years six of the girls were married.

The only thing wrong with this farmer's idea, the speaker pointed out, was that he didn't have it soon enough, as he was now left with the big house and only one child. With that exception, his plan was altogether to be recommended

Thanks Bryan For Aid.

William Morrow of Scottsbluff, who spent considerable time in Washington in an effort to secure favorable action by congress on the recommendations of the reclamation fact finding committee as to the future handling of the various irrigation projects of the government, has written Governor Bryan expressing appreciation of the service rendered by the governor in getting proper action from the committees of congress, and predicting that the bill will become a law as soon as congress convenes.

LIONS HEAR AN ENGINEER

Prof. J. E. Davis of Ames Speaks On the Service of Engineering to Agriculture.

The service of engineering to agriculture was the subject of Prof. J. E. Davidson's talk before the Lions club Thursday at the chamber of commerce. Professor Davidson is from the Iowa state college at Ames and was introduced as the dean of agricultural engineers. He is in Lincoln for the convention of the national agricultural engineering society.

Professor Davidson commented on the marked rise of standards of living on American farms within the past few decades, making them far higher than the standards of any other country. He touched on the development of the tractor, on soil saving, farm planning and various other enterprises in which the aid of the engineer has been sought, and concluded with an account of achivements in other lands, such as those of the British in Palestine since the world war. These included improving the water supply and building five dams across the river Jordan to provide irrigation for the valley. "The virgins of the future may be just as foolish," he said, "but they'll have electric lights!"

The next meeting of the Lions will take place in Omaha, where the international convention opens Tuesday. During the remainder of the summer the members will have luncheon every week on the regular date, but no stated programs.

INCREASED ASSESSMENTS

Keya Paha County, First On List, Shows Higher Valuation of Property.

The county of Keya Paha was the first of the ninety-three doing business in Nebraska to file its complete assessment of property for 1924 with State Tax Commissioner Smith. Frontier and Sherman had sent in their lists. but as the state board had not at that time made up its figufes for railroad assessments, the reports were sent back to be held until these could be added. Keya Paha county has no railroad.

The report shows a total valuation of $6,261,960, or $16,890 more htan for 1923. Lands show an increase of $5,045 and a total of $4,362,000. Lots are listed at $199,945, an increase of $14,055. Cattle show an increase in number and an increase of $16 125 in value Horses are valued at $170,820, an increase of $4,245.

CANADA MAIL IS TIED UP

POSTAL WORKERS CALL STRIKE THRUOUT THE NATION.

Conference Between Leaders of Workers and Government Proves Unsatisfactory and Walkout Follows.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 19.Final action in the threatened Canadian nation-wide postal strike was deferred until 5 p. m. today when members of the cabinet and of the postal federation went into session at the capital this morning.

TORONTO, Ont., June 19.—Postal service thruout Canada was tied up today, leaders of the postal workers' organization asserted, following issuance of the strike call at 5 p. m. Wednesday.

Strike leaders said the tie-up was complete in Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec City and that advices from the west indicated the workers in principal cities there had quit practically as a unit.

Yesterday's conference between leaders of the workers and the government was completely unsatisfactory, the committee of the cabinet refusing to consider a demand for increased wages.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 19. — Last minute government concessions were ineffective to stop the proposed nation-wide postal strike in some sections today, but in others workers appeared at their posts, awaiting final word from their leaders. Workers were voting by telegram whether to continue with plans for the general walkout, or remain at work.

Acting Postmaster General Stewart rushed preparations in case other workers followed the example of those at Toronto, where 1,700 men went out. The men were warned that parliament will be called upon to use every means at its disposal to see that mails are not tied up.

Should the walkout become complete, the strikers assert, mails will be tied up at the international border and business badly hampered.

JOHNSON HEADS KIWANIANS

Rockford, Ill., Man Defeats John A. Moss of Milwaukee At Closing Session.

DENVER, June 19.—Victor M. Johnson of Rockford, Ill., was elected president of the Kiwanis International in a contest with John A. Moss of Milwaukee at the closing session of the convention here today. The vote was 951 to 356.

J. Walter Taylor of Montreal and Ralph Anneman of Scranton, Pa., were selected without opposition as vice presidents.

Fred C. W. Parker of Chicago, was re-elected international secretary and Russell E. Ward of Jackson, Mich., international treasurer. Neither had opposition in the elections.

Newly elected trustees are: Dr. Burton D. Myers, Thomas Bath, Charles W. Olds. Douglas A. Scott, Louis Mitchell, Frank Snell, Robert N. Young, O. Samuel Cummings, Frank Williamson and Raymond N. Prosser.

MACREADY AVOIDS HARM

When Plane Plunges Downward, Aviator Walks Out On Wing and Drops With Parachute.

DAYTON, O., June 19.—His plane plunging earthward from an altitude of 5,000 feet directly over the business district of Dayton, Lieut. John A. MacReady, hero of the first nonstop flight across the continent, averted a disastrous accident late last night when he walked calmly out on the wing of his hurtling ship and stepped off into space supported only by his emergency parachute.

Then as he sailed with the breeze, MacReady watched the ship he had left fall to earth and explode just outside the city limits.

MacReady's parachute landed in the tree tops on the brink of a ravine and after several calls he succeeded in arousing two men who lived nearby and they came out and cut him down.

DAUGHERTY BAC KTO SHACK

Former Attorney General Resting in Cottage On Deer Creek, Washington Court House.

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, O., June 19.—aHrry M. Daugherty has gone back to "the shack."

The former attorney general, it was learned today, is resting in the quiet little cottage on Deer Creek, recovering from the effects of ptomaine poisoning which attacked him at the republican national convention last week in Cleveland.

"The shack" for several years was a favorite retreat for the attorney general, his brother, Mal Daugherty and thir close friend, the late Jess Smith.

When Smith died he bequeathed his share in "the shack" to the Daughertys.

The former attorney general has with him at the cottage only his chauffeur and cook.

SOLONS USE POISON GAS

Try to Break Fulibuster By Employing Chlorine.

SEVERAL MADE UNCONSCIOUS

Rhode Island Governor is Hero of Occasion.

Deadlock in Rhode Island Senate Was Due to Democratic Insistence That Republicans Vote For Amendment.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 19.—Despite the injection of poison gas into the senate chamber of the state legisalture here in an effort to end a deadlock with the result that nineteen senators were overcome and treated by physicians ,the filibuster remained in effect late this afternoon with neither side showing signs of yielding.

Governor Flynn and Lieutenant Governor Toupin were seeking a solution of the mystery as to who introduced a wad of paper and rags soaked in what seemed to be chlorine into the chamber.

The senate had been deadlocked since 2 p. m. Tuesday and in continuous session. Many senators were affected by fumes from the gas this morning, but aftre being treated, returned to the hcamber. Early in the afternoon, some republicans left on their homes under police guard, claiming they were poisoned.

The republicans wished to pass an appropriation bill and adjourn but the democrats refused to approve the provision until the republicans had voted in favor of a constitutional convention.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 19.—What is believed to have been poison gas was used today in an attempt to break the filibuster in the Rhode Island state senate, which has been in continuous session since 2 p. m. Tuesday.

The deadlock is due to democratic insistence that republican members vote in favor of a constitutional convention before the annual appropriation bill is passed and the senate adjourns. The chair refuses to recognize republicans.

Fist fights, rioting on a small scale, and humorous scenes such as when the speaker, Lieutenant Governor Toupin, a democrat, was shaved as he sat in the chair, have marked the long drawn out battle of Wills, but today climax was reached with the introduction of gas into the chamber.

About 7:45 a. m. those senators who were awake after the long night noticed a strong odor of gas permeating the room. One by one they started coughing but none would leave the room.

A few minutes later a reporter, sitting at the press table near the rostrum, fell over unconscious.

Lieutenant Governor Todpin, swaying on his feet, his head drooping, caught at one of his body guards to save himself from falling. Two men ran from the chamber, crying for assistance and doctors.

Governor Flynn, who was in his office at the time, dashed into the senate chamber. Searching about the rostrum and sniffing the air, he looked under tables and chairs and finally found a bundle of wet papers under the lieutenant governor's chair.

Without waiting to investigate further, Governor Flynn ran from the chamber throwing the papers into the corridor.

They smelled strongly of what was declared to be chlorine gas and chemists were sent for to analyze the liquid with which they had been soaked.

Several senators complained that they were nearly overcome by the gas but the filibuster continued without interruption

The senate continued its deadlocked session, while Governor Flynn and the lieutenant governor began an investigation to determine who had placed the gas soaked wad under the speakers seat.

After the uproar had subsided, it was found that four senators were overcome by the gas and nearly all those in the room were made ill.

Two senators were taken to the Rhole Island hospital, suffering from the effects of the gas Two others were carried from the chamber and revived in the corridor.

COAL FINDERS ASK REWARD

WINNEBAGOES SAY THEY HAVE A REAL VEIN.

Call Attention of State Officers to Offer of Reward For Such a Discovrey In Nebraska.

Charles Rave, Abbott Hensley, John Blackdeer, Lawrence Smith, Abraham Priest, all members of the Winnebago tribe, drove from their reservation to Lincoln and were visitors at the state house, state historical society rooms.

These Winnebagos are especially interested just now in the discovery of coal on their reservation about three miles east of Winnebago station on the Burlington road. A shaft has been dug down thirty-five feet and a thirty-one inch vein of coal discovered.

These men are also interested in the history of the Winnebago tribe. There remains a great deal of historical work to be done before a complete and full history of the Winnebagos is made. This work has been done for the Omaha tribe by Miss Alice Fletcher and Carey LaFlesche. The Winnebago tribe has a very interesting history. They were great warriors two hundred years ago and took part in the wars of the lake region. Many of the members of this tribe served in the United States army during the Black Hawk war in 1832. The descendants and other members of the Winnebago tribe have claims against the United States government which have never been taken care of These Indians from the Winnebago country called on Secretary of State Pool Thursday to secure information as to what is necessary to claim the state standing reward for coal found on Nebraska lands. Later they went to discuss with Dr. Condra of the soil survey the character of their find. The state had looked into the matter some time ago, but its agents did not seem to be as enthusiastic as are the Indians over the workable character of the vein.

PREMIER DEFENDS ENVOY

Declares Cummins Would Have Failed in Duty Had He Not Made Representations.

LONDON, June 19.—Prime Minister MacDonald, speaking in the house of commons this afternoon vigorously defended the actions of H Cunard Cummins, British diplomatic representative in Mexico City, whose expulsion has been ordered by the Mexican government.

"Cummins would have failed in his duty had he not made the diplomatic representations to which the Mexican government objected," MacDonald said.

"This government cannot see anything objectionable in them.

"If the foreign offices of the world started objecting to such communications there would be no diplomatic relations."

SPILLMAN ASKS WRIT

WANTS JUDGE HASTINGS TO ENJOIN OIL COMPANIES.

Would Prohibit Standard, Nicholas, U. S. Oil Works and Thirteen Others From Conspiring to Fix Prices.

OMAHA, June 19.—Attorney General Spillman today asked District Judge Hastings for an injunction prohibiting Standard Oil company, Nicholas Oil corporation, U. S. Oil Works and thirteen other oil companies from conspiring to fix prices in Omaha, refusing to sell to independent dealers, discriminating in prices against out-state points, or agreeing to cut prices below the cost of production.

Judge Hastings set July 1 as the date for hearing on the application.

Spillman in an informal hearing before Judge Hastings said the request for an injunction was a proceeding supplemental to the ouster suit brought against the same companies some weeks ago.

Spillman said he also contemplated filing criminal proceedings against the companies if they failed to obey the injunction if it is issued.

The complaint filed today amends and brings up to date a former complaint filed February 18 last.

"On or about February 18, 1924," the complaint charges, "the defendants were engaged in, and are still engaged in a conspiracy, combination, confederation and trust for the purpose and with the intent of fixing establishing and controlling the price at which gasoline must be and should be offered for sale and sold within the city of Omaha."

Gives Ivy Day Address.

BOOSTERS TAKE OFF

TRADE TRIPPERS START FOR FREMONT AT 9 A. M.

Twenty-two Carloads Will Spend Day in Cornhusker Towns, Spreading the Gospel of Lincoln.

Twenty-two automobiles bearing eighty chamber of commerce members and sixteen younger boosters in the guise of Brinton's Boy band, started from the chamber of commerce Thursday at 9 o'clock, bound for Fremont via Wahoo and Ceresco The slogan "Link up with Lincoln" decorated every car ,and each was marked "Lincoln Jobbers and Manufacturers" and numbered.

J. Cass Cornell, John D. Bushnell, J. C. Ridnour and W. S. Whitten led the caravan in the official car and Chairman E. T. Scott of the jobber and manufacturers subdivision was in car No. 1. Chief Johnstone went along to handle the expected crowds and help W. T. Irons guard the commissary, otherwise a huge carton of candy to be given away. A couple of newspapermen were also present.

The boosters expected to visit Wahoo and Ceresco and reach Fremont in good time for luncheon. An elaborate program had been prepared at Fremont, they were informed. Part of the entertainment was to be provided by the chamber of commerce glee club from Lincoln. This was the first trade trip of the season, and part of an elaborate program of advertising projected by the jobbers and manufacturers of the chamber

FREMONT, Neb., June 19. — Lincoln jobbers and manufacturers, officers of the chamber of commerce, a double quartet from the chamber glee club, and Brinton's boys' band, reached here at 12:10, calling on the business men and boosting Lincoln and Lincoln made goods.

The party arrived on schedule time, after making short stops at Ceresco, Swedeburg, Wahoo and Colon, handing out candy and souvenir balloons and giving a short concert at each stop They will take in Cedar Bluffs on the return trip

The caravan was met at the Platte river bridge and conveyed into town by Harry Webb of May Brothers Co., A. M Talbott, manager of the gas company, and W C Wiley, of the Wiley Wholesale Co They had luncheon at the Pathfinder with the Kiwanis club, this being the regular meeting date, and the chamber of commerce President Ira F Richardson of Kiwanis introduced President J Cass Cornell of the Lincoln chamber of commerce, who in turn presented E T Scott chairman of the jobbers' and manufacturers' subdivision Several other visitors made brief talks This was the first time since 1922 that a Lincoln trade delegation had visited Fremont.

PRICE MUST COME DOWN

GOVERNOR SAYS LINCOLN WILL FOLLOW OMAHA LEAD.

Regards Belligerent Utterances of Lincoln Dealers As On Par With Defiant Attitude in the Metropolis.

"That sounds like the same talk we heard in Omaha when public-spirited citizens there invested in filling stations for the purpose of forcing down gasoline prices," said Governor Bryan, Thursday, commenting on the declaration of local dealers that they would not let him browbeat them into lowering the price so that he might claim credit for it. "I expect and will require that prices drop here as they did in Omaha.

"The fifty stations in Omaha that are selling at reduced prices furnish all the proof needed of the violation of the anti-discrimination law by the stations in Lincoln owned by the same companies. When I return from my ten days vacation I expect to see that the attorney general has started prosecutions or has some of the violators in jail.

"If that result has not been accomplished by that time I shall use some of the funds set aside for that purpose to employ an attorney who will make use of the restraining power of the courts to secure relief for the consumers of gasoline and to have the case now in court brought by the attorney general advanced for speedy hearing. I want restraining orders not investigations.

"There is one Roosevelt principle of action that I have followed since I have been connected with the public service. I do not look into the statutes or constitution to find out whether they say I can do a thing in the public interest, but whether they prohibit being done what needs to be done. I know of no constitution, statute of city ordinance that will prevent the state, the county or the city from selling to the individual taxpayers as they have been doing to agents of the public as represented by their officers."

Right to Use Funds.

The governor said that the money necessary to put and keep the state in the retail oil business would come from the revolving fund at the disposal of the state department of public works. Auditor Marsh was asked if he would approve claims of this character. He said that he would not cross that bridge until he came to it, but that as he felt sure the legislature would have not appropriated any money to put the state into competition with private business, he did not see how the state could legally go into the oil business any more than it could into the grocery or clothing business.

Governor Bryan said that he did not believe any state officer would help "the gas combine rob the public," or put any obstacle in the way. He called upon the city to open its filling station to the public generally on the 15 cent basis, which would give a profit, and hoped the county would not wait until a track could be built before it joined in, and thus help the state take care of the business. He said he would supply these in carload lots, and that if they would join a better distribution of benefits of the lower price could be obtained and a reduction forced all the earlier He also called on public-spirited citizens to put in filling stations and help out

The tank for the state station is now in place, and the pump is on the way The governor leaves for New York Friday afternoon, but he has instructed Purchasing Agent Farris to start the station as soon as the pump is in place The station will be reached by driving off South street and inside the yard there is plenty of circling space

"This will be run," said the governor, "on a combination of Piggly Wiggly and pay as you enter. There will be no candy, no flowers, and no frills."

M'ADOO CALLS STRATEGISTS

GLASS, LOVE, KRAMER AND CUMMINGS IN CONFERENCE.

Judge Rockwell, McAdoo's Campaign Manager, Says Strength May Reach Peak as Early as Fifth Ballot.

Robert J. Bender

NEW YORK, June 19.—William Gibbs McAdoo today called his strategists into conference to map out a short, sharp campaign to effect his nomination in the democratic national convention on or before the tenth ballot.

Those called were Senator Carter Glass, diminutive statesman from Virginia, who arrived today in Panama hat and white palm beach suit to find himself a prominent dark horse; Tom Love of Texas, J. Bruce Kramer and Homer S. Cummings, formerly chairman of the democratic national committee.

At the same time the opposition forces were preparing to prolong the struggle in the hope of breaking down the strength of the former treasury chief, pushing him out of the running.

Judge Rockwell, campaign manager fro McAdoo, says the latter's strength may reach nts peak as early as the fifth ballot and taht McAdoo will surely go over the tenth. George Brennan, Illinois chieftain, who wants Al Smith nominated, says there will be no early decision and intimates the voting may surpass the endurance tests of 1920—when it required forty-four ballots to nominate James M. Cox—and the record set in 1912 when Woodrow Wilson was nominated on the forty-sixth ballot.

The strategy of the anti-McAdoo forces at the outset will be to "get rid of McAdoo first." Then Smith will be given his big chance and, if he fails of nomination, time will have arrived to agree in the rival camps upon a compromise.

A Coue Campaign.

McAdoo's supporters are carrying on a Coue-ized campaign of "We will win, we will win." They are talking it constantly and as Judge Rockwell says, "we're going to yell every time McAdoo's name is mentioned, every time a ballot is announced—in fact we're going to yell for him constantly."

On the other hand Brennan, almost isolated in the room of the eighth floor of the Woldorf conferred with Smith, Mayor Hylan and other of the Smith and Anti-McAdoo leaders, as he laid his lines for the coming struggle.

One of the first balloons to go up from these conferences was labelled "Smith-Hearst political peace reported." It was said the feud between the governor and the publisher had been sealed thru Brennans efforts and that Hearst papers will not attack the Smith candidacy. Meantime the Hearst papers in New York appeared today devoting much of their space to friendly consideration of McAdoo.

Another storm signal sent up by Brennan was announcement that he favors a plank in the platform mentionig the ku klux klan by name and denouncing it and its principles. This might be construed as a double edged stroke—directed on the one hand against McAdoo, who has been alleged frequently to be profiting by klan support and indicating on the other hand that possibly Brennan might ultimately take kindly to the candidacy of Senator Underwood of Alabama, who makes the klan one of his major issues.

World Welcomes Hearst.

Naturally Brennan, who is for Smith, would welcome a kindly attitude by Hearst, particularly since Hearst and Brennan have worked together satisfactorily in Chicago and Cook county campaigns. It would be surprising to the point of high humor if Smith and Hearst were to be found politically arm and arm with Brennan standing aft, hands upraised, saying, "God bless you."

As the opening of the convention draws nearer ,the city is being shaken by new booms almost daily. The overnight conversations of the newspapermen and scattered delegates brought out a crash or two today for Senator Pat Harrison as a dark horse, Senator Thomas Walsh of oil probe fame and Governor Davis of Kansas.

Farm Bureau Holds Picnic.

WINNEBAGO, Neb., June 19.—The annual picnic of the Thurston County Farm Bureau was held in a grove near Walthill Tuesday. Despite the storm of the previous night and the condition of the roads, the picnic was well attended A pageant was given depicting the changes that have occurred since the country was first settled by the whites An ox team drawing a "prairie schooner" fololwed by an old Indian in regalia carrying the flag was one of the central features Many questions pertaining to farm management were discussed and several addresses were given.

ZEHRUNG HAS SAFETY PLAN

ONE DROWNING A YEAR IN POOL ONE TOO MANY.

Even the Note of a Parent Will Not Admit Small Child to Waters of City's Big Splash Tub.

Determined if possible to bring to an end the muny pool record of one drowning a year, Mayor Zehrung will this season apply more drastic rules to the admission of small children. The matter of who are and who are not small children will be left to the discretion of employes in charge.

"Small children will not be admitted unless in company with parent or some grown person who assumes entire responsibility," said the mayor. "In other years it has been the more or less common practice for the parent to send a note with the child. Notes will not be accepted."

The pool opened Thursday morning with an attendance of twenty-five. Later in the day the splash crowd increased with indications of a bumper attendance by night.

The mayor announced that the initial band concert will be held in Antelope park from 3 to 5 p. m. Sunday. Eleven concerts will be held during the summer season, the final one to be held on the last Sunday in August. Two or three of the eleven will be held in the F street park and one at the O street entrance of Antelope.

Open air devotional and musical services will be held from the band stand at the conclusion of the Sunday concert.

MANY REPORT PROWLERS

Police Busy Wednesday Night Answering Calls From Six Places —Find No Suspects.

Police were kept on the jump Wednesday night investigating six reports of prowlers in the residential district. They were unable to apprehend any suspects. All the calls came in between 9 and 11 p. m.

M. E. Shasteen, 2346 W, reported that a tall negro was prowling about his house. He was described as wearing blue overalls, striped blue shirt and a dark hat.

At 919 North Twenty-sixth a prowler was chased from the back porch and down the street by the man of the house. His description was given as being five feet ten inches tall, wearing a brown hat and unionalls.

A suspicious looking character was reported prowling around Twenty-second and W and a little later a call came from 455 North Sixteenth where a man about five feet, six inches tall, wearing a black hat with a crushed crown, was sneaking about.

Two prowlers were reported at 431 North Sixteenth street between 11 and 12 o'clock.

R. E Dean, 928 North Twenty-fifth, said that some one broke his screen door but didnt get in the house He saw the prowler, describing him as five feet, eight inches in height, wearing dark pants, grey shirt and a dark hat with a crushed in brim.

A thief took some eggs and thirty-six cents from a milk bottle which was on the back porch of the home of H. F. Stonesifer, 2425 Vine Police believe as most of the descriptions tally, that the prowlers were the same two men

HOT FIGHT DEVELOPS ON ST. PAUL FLOOR

Chairman Taylor Automatically Calls Recess When Break Imminent.

"BOB" IGNORED BY MAJORITY

Communists Denounce LaFollette in Fiery Speeches.

RUTHENBERG LEADS ATTACK

Declares Cause of Workers and Farmers Cannot Be Represented By Organization of Liberal Business.

CONVENTION HALL, ST. PAUL, Minn., June 19.—A hot fight developed between communist and LaFollette forces on the floor of the new "third party" convention here today.

Just when a break seemed coming Chairman Taylor automatically recessed the convention without putting the matter to a vote. The fight will be taken up later in the day.

A report of a majority of the nomination committee favored ignoring the candidacy of LaFollette and permitting the new national committee of the party to select a candidate for president and vice president later.

A substitute was offered by the communists which would ask LaFollette again to run as a candidate of the party on the communistic party platform. In speeches, communists denounced LaFollette.

A minority report would pledge the convention toward "favoring the candidacy of Robert M. LaFollette" without asking him anything about it.

C. A. Ruthenberg, communist leader led the attack upon LaFollette

"It is a question of polling 1,000,000 or 2,000,000 votes for a mass class candidate or forming some sort of coalition of those who do not represent us, to poll 5,000,000 votes, if that is possible," Ruthenberg, said.

"We adopted the organization plan stating that we would found this party on the basis of groups represented here

"The cause of the workers and farmers cannot be represented by big business nor by taht organization of liberal business represented by LaFollette (boos and applaus.)

"LaFollette's record in congress shows that he has not extended a hand to those who suffered most under our existing conditions.

A majority report from the nominations committee leaving the question of a presidential and vice presidential candidate to the national committee was adopted by an overwhelming mapority after a brief but spirited fight.

Farmer delegates joined with the communists for adoption of that plan.

Can Swing Behind Him.

"We can swing behind LaFollette lat eif he runs," William Mahoney, farmerleader who previously had fought for endorsement of LaFollette, declared. "Why should we invite him to slap us in the face again?"

"He doesnt' want our endorsement and he should not have it." Delegate Morris Fromme of Wisconsin, representing the communists' sentiments told the convention.

Judging from the applause those who were out for endorsement of LaFollette were in a small minority.

A minority report was presented by Delegate Taylor of Kansas declaring "We favor LaFollette for the presidency." This was greeted with silence and Taylor said: "I suppose you will rip me up the back."

LaFollette was ripped up and down the back by communist speakers.

Ben Gitlow, New York representative of the federated farmers labor party—a communist organization—declared during the debate that "LaFollette is not interested in the workers of this country—he is interested in Senator LaFollette."

This was met by wild applause fro mthe delegates.

Played Into Wall Street Hands.

"Who was it played into the hands of the plunderbunds of Wall stret?" Gitlow shoted. "Who was it who deserted the workers and permitted exploitation of their earnings? It was Senator LaFollette"

Mahoney in explaining his position declared: "We do not wish to do anything embarrassing to him or to us. If we endorse him we are informed that tomorrow he would send out another letter denouncing us. If we adhere to the new plan we are protected in case LaFollette should die or change his mind, as he has so often done. (Loud applause) We can select independent candidates later if we desire"

PROBLEMS OF AGRICULTURE

DISCUSS STANDARDIZATION AND ELECTRIFICATION.

Amercian Society Members in Annual Convention at Agricultural Farm Discussed Rural Community Matters.

Engineering problems relating to farm structures, the standardization of farm houses and building and electrification of rural communities, were subjects discussed in papers at the two section meetings of the American society of agricultural engineers at the college of agriculture Thursday morning. About 150 engineers were in attendance.

In the farm structures department a number of papers were read which dealt with the stucture of standardization of buildings for the purpose of cutting down costly mistakes and misunderstandings between the farmer and the contractor was discussed. The establishment of a building code to prevent the erection of unsanitary and unsafe buildings was taken up. Not only the standardization of the exterior but also the interior was needed, said Mr. Havenbill. He pointed out the importance of a building code for the standardization of houses. It was asserted in the discussion that all household furniture except tables and chairs, should be included in the p s for the house.

The spacing of posts in barns and ing sheds as affected by the tu g ra s of various vehicles," was discussed by Erwin K. Young, Ohio State university. A report of the committee on farm building ventilation was given by M. A. R. Kelley, agricultural engineer, department of agriculture, chairman of the committee.

Rural electrification was discussed and a paper was read on "Some Research Features Involved in the Application of Electricity to Agriculture," by R. W. Trullinger, specialist in rural engineering office of experiment stations, U. S. department of agriculture.

Mr. Trullinger said that, "the purpose of this paper was to bring to light and analyze in a preliminary manner some of the apparently more important research features involved in the proposed development, having for its ultimate objective the exclusive use of electricity in all agricultural processes requiring "a tangible source of energy." Treatment of seeds and seedlings by electricity has apparently been divided into electrochemical treatment and attempts to affect direct stimulation by electrical currents, said Mr. Trullinger. He also discussed the application of electricity to the development of poultry. "A certain limited amount of experience has also indicated the possibility of using electricity as a stimulus to the growth and development of poultry," said Mr. Trullinger. He stated that chickens have been raised for the market in five weeks instead of three months as it usually takes. The electricity stimulated the blood circulation of poultry by lowering the viscosity of the blood.

BREAKS OFF WITH MEXICO

BRITAIN RECALLS MINISTER WHO DEFIED OBREGON.

Also Abandons Proposed Recognition Mission Which Was to Have Been Headed By Sir Thomas Hohler.

LONDON, June 19.—Without formal announcement to that effect, Great Britain has broken off relations with Mexico to the extent of recalling H. Cunard Cummins and abandoning a proposed recognition mission which was to have been headed by Sir Thomas Hohler.

What the next step may be is being debated in government and semi-official circles. There is some suggestion that an apology may be demanded; others contend the situation will be permitted to simmer. Britain never has recognized the Obregon government and the Hohler mission was to have considered such a step.

Premier MacDonald referred to the Mexican attitude towards Cummins as "a grave breach of international courtesy."

MEXICO CITY, June 19.—"I am glad the Cummins affair has been amicably arranged. I am pleased that Great Britain at last meets our request, made so many times, for withdrawal of this man, who for so long has been a stumbling block to understanding."

President Obregon of Mexico, in an interview thus dismissed the incident arising over this country's dissatisfaction with the British charge des archives, H. C. Cummins.

"We always have acted in good faith and a friendly spirit," Obregon said.

He added that he only regretted that Britain, after resognizing Russia, could not see fit to do as much for Mexico.

FASCIST ORGAN SUSPENDS

Italian Newspaper Quits Thru Agitation Over Kidnaping of Socialist.

ROME, June 19.—Corriere Italiano, former organ of the fascist government, is suspending publication because of agitationgrowing out of the kidnaping and probable assassination of the socialist deputy, Matteotti, it was announced today.

The newspaper had been attacked bitterly ever since Filipo Filippelli, one of its editors, was arrested for alleged participation in the abduction plot.

Meantime, the search for Matteotti's body continues without success altho police said they have all the men who took part in the plot under arrest. Milan dispatches said a mysterious international adventurer named Ottone Thierstvald has been arrested there in connection with the kidnaping and told police Matteotti's body could be found in a villa near Fiuggi.

RECOVER CARL RHODES' BODY.

FALLS CITY, Neb., June 19.—The body of Carl Rhodes, twelve, who was drowned in the Missouri river near Craig, Mo., last Thursday when he slipped from a log while playing with a companion, was recovered four miles north of St. Joseph, Mo., about fifty miles from where the boy met his death.

The other lad, it has been revealed was saved by clinging to the log in the swift current. Farmers attracted by his shouts pulled him out of the water after he had been carried downstream for a mile and a half. Funeral and burial for Carl was at Falls City.

SETS OUT TO CLAIM ISLAND

CAPTAIN SEEKS WRANGEL FOR UNITED STATES.

Lane Puts Out From Nome For Island to Raise Stars and Stripes—Soviet Also Would Have Wrangel.

ABOARD THE SCHOONER HERMAN, OFF NOME, Alaska, June 18.—The American schooner Herman, commanded by Capt. Louis Lane of San Francisco, put out from Nome for Wrangel island at noon today, opening another chapter, perhaps the most thrilling, in the island's grim history. Captain Lane will raise the Stars and Stripes over Wrangel and claim it for the United States. It is known that the soviet government is also planning to send a ship to Wrangel this season to reaffirm its claim to the island. "Sourdough" Hans, a Nome seaman, who was with Capt. Harold Noice on his relief trip to Wrangel last season and who was frozen in off the coast of Siberia later in the year corroborated this fact. He talked with the governor of northeastern Siberia who told him of the Russian plans and expressed great indignation that Noice had failed to secure permission from the Russian government to land on the island.

Asked what he would do if he encountered Russian opposition, Captain Lane made a gesture that indicated he would not leave the island without attempting to carry out his plans at any hazard.

Chartered by Lomans

The Herman is chartered by Loman brothers of Nome, who control the Alaskan reindeer industry. They have taken over the interests of Viljhalmur Stefansson, who for three years has fought a losing fight to save Wrangel for the British empire. Both the Canadian parliament and the British government have repudiated the claims he established for them.

Captain Lane is one of the best known skippers in the Arctic. He has sailed among the ice floes for a quarter century, and took the first merchant ship to Wrangel in 1910. Harold Noice, who headed the relief party to Wrangel last year and Lorne Knight, who died there, made their first Artic trips with Capt. Lane. Latter found Steffansson on Bank's island in 1914, after hope for the Canadian explorer had been abandoned.

The Herman will enter the ice fields almost immediately and skirt the edges until ice opens up enough to permit setting a course for the island. At this time of year the ice is drifting north and west. Great herds of walrus follow it. The Herman's crew will hunt these walrus until conditions are right for the dash to Wrangel island. Captain Lane expects this to be early in August.

To Return Party.

The Herman plans to take off Charles Wells and thirteen Eskimos left on the island last year by Captain Noice. This party was well equipped and is composed of men inured to the rigors of an Arctic winter. Still the party which established itself on Wrangel three years ago, headed by Alan Crawford of Toronto, was well equipped and of the four men and one Eskimo woman, the woman alone survived to greet Captain Noice when the relief party landed last summer. Crawford Milton Galle of Texas, and Frederick Maurer of Ohio, died in an attempt to reach Siberia across the ice pack and Lord Knight of Oregon, succumbed to scurvy in his hunger stricken camp on the island. If the Russians reach Wrangel before Captain Lane, the chances are that Wells and his Eskimos will be prisoners and their winter's fur and ivory catch confiscated goods.

Captain Lane is instructed to continue occupation of the island if conditions warrant it. Whether he will leave another party is problematical but it is certain that he will leave the American flag flying where the Canadian flag now flies. The Herman will also leave a memorial on the grave of Lorne Knight.

Your Problems

BY MARY GORDON

Dear Mary Gordon: Two years ago for the second time I married a widow with a girl of fifteen. I love them both and do all I can to make them happy. I am now forty years old and making $55 a week.

There is only one thing troubling me and that is that my wife would rather work downtown than to stay at home. She prefers to work from 8:30 to 5:45 in a department store for $15 a week, instead of staying home, doing a little housework and having the rest of the time for herself, and a cheerful disposition for us when we get home. The girl has been going to school you see.

I try to argue with my wife because when she works down town she is very cross and nothing the girl or I can do will please her.

I love her very much, but she gets so mad when I tell her I would much rather she would stay home. It hurst a man to have people say his wife has to work outside the home, you know, Mary.

Not that I am selfish—if I really thought it was for her own good I would be glad for her to work. But it is not—standing on her feet all day, she is so tired and I know it couldn't be good for her or she wouldn't be so cross. Would you suggest something I could do to keep her happy and contented at home?—Hoping.

A. A woman who is happy in her home has no reason for wanting to leave it. Usually there are two things which make her wish to do outside work. One is lack of money. The other is lack of occupation thruout the day.

Do you give her plenty of money for some pretty clothes for herself and the girl? Is your home furnished the way she would like to have it?

Not long ago I had a pitiful letter from a young woman who had decided to leave her husband simply because he did not allow her to handle any money. Is that the trouble in your home? Even tho a woman has little to spend on herself, it gives her pleasure to pay her own household bills. Indeed, it is almost a necessity, when she is accustomed to money passing thru her hands.

If you think things over well and decide you are not allowing her as much money as you can, try to increase it. Honestly now, don't you know the reason for her desire to clerk?

If you love her as much as you say you do, you will be honest with yourself. Then you can decide the trouble and find a cure for it.

One who wants the Law enforced: Tom W. Carroll is state sheriff at Lincoln. He has a number of deputies working under his direction, but all complaints should go to Mr. Carroll. A petition to the governor or the state sheriff, asking that the law be enforced in your county, reciting the attitude of county officers and giving such instances as can be proved, ought to produce results. Known violations of the law by county officers should be brought to the attention of the state sheriff that prosecutions may be started.

My dear Mary Gordon: I would like to correspond with a certain boy, but I do not know whether to ask him first or whether I should be asked by him. The correspondence should continue only thruout the summer.

Please, Miss Mary, tell me whether I should write first or not, for I think that he will be too bashful to begin to correspond.—Miss Brown-Eyes.

A. If you're sure it's timidity which causes him to remain silent, it would be all right to ask him if he would like to write to you. Ordinarily, however, the man suggests the correspondence.

Dearest Mary Gordon: I have been a silent but interested reader of your columns for some time. After having a little trouble of my own I concluded to write you, thinking you might be able to help me out of it.

About two years ago a boy came to our home to stay with us and go to school as he had no home of his own. My parents got to liking him so well that they adopted him. There were no boys in our home, all girls much older than myself. (He and I are the same age, 16.) We always got along fine together until just a few weeks ago. He went away from home one night when daddie told him not to, when he got back he told him that he must not do that again. From that time on he seems angry at me. If I say anything to him he will turn his back and walk away. I asked him what the trouble was and he said "nothing." Then I asked him if I had hurt his feelings in any way and he said "I told you there wasn't anything the matter." Then I asked him why he acted that way towards me and he mumbled something that I couldn't understand. What should I do? Try and find out what the trouble is again? I can't think of anything that I did or said that would have made him angry at me. If he would only tell me what I did to him I would gladly ask his forgiveness and try to make things as they were before, but I can't stand to live with a person who is acting like that towards me all the time.—One who is in trouble.

A. Don't let it worry you any longer. Perhaps he thinks you had something to do with your father's reprimand. But if he does he is unjust. Maybe he is just sulky at the world in general. Try leaving him alone for a while. Be pleasant when occasion calls for it, but don't force your company on him. Above all, don't ask him, "What's the matter?" any more. It makes him think his sulks are a matter of importance, while really they're not. Treat him as if nothing had happened. Some of these days, he will be natural again. Growing boys and girls, too, sometimes have those "spells."

My Neighbor Says:

When baking juicy pies put a layer of fine bread crumbs over the lower crust before putting in the fruit.

When making a frill do not take one long thread for the gathers. You will find it far easier to arrange if the length is divided into sections and the fullness arranged regularly on each.

If you want to utilize left-over boiled potatoes cut them up, add a slice of bread cut into dice and fry the potatoes and bread together. This dish is delicious and helps to make a few potatoes "go around."

WILL ENTER THE GAS WAR

Fremont Citizens Plan to Launch Drive to Force Price to the Omaha Level.

FREMONT, Neb., June 19.—Fremont gasoline users, inspired by the success of the fifteen cent league at Omaha, will soon launch an attempt to force a reduction in gasoline prices in this city, it was learned today.

Present plans call for a private filling station purchased with money subscribed by various citizens interested in the movement. Many Fremont automobile owners who had occasion to make frequent trips to Omaha filled their tanks with the lower priced gas in preference to paying 20 cents and more here in Fremont. Now that the Omaha cut no longer seems to be a temporary movement, they are anxious to bring the price in Fremont to an equal level.

The tentative proposition would have a number of citizens contribute fifty dollars each to a fund toward establishing a private filling station. They plan to experiment with the purchase of one car of gasoline at first and if the venture proves successful, go into the business on larger scale.

WOULD LET U. S. HAVE GOLD

Some Pessimistic British Experts Think Some Day America May Have Too Much of It.

LONDON, June 19.—The United States, "gorged with gold," may wake up some fine morning to find that the rest of the world has ditched the gold basis and left America holding the sack—a sack of yellow metal, become, by common agreement of other lands, worth no more than so much junk!

This rather fantastic prospect is the idea advanced by certain financiers and economists here. Their views do not represent the general concensus of business opinion—for most Londoners still cling fondly to the theory that gold is pretty good stuff for anybody to have, even the United States.

The particular set of "experts" who foresee the United States left flat—smothered under the gold which the world has repudiated—view all things American thru jaundiced eyes, and perhaps they have permitted a confusion of financial facts and personal prejudices. Anyhow, they insist that America is in one awful fix, and is certain to get worse, all because she has an overdose of gold and is in a fair way of accumulating more.

Other declarations by this group of London economists are:

1. The United States cannot run world shipping or world banking and financing, does not understand international financing, and can never oust the pound sterling and replace it with the dollar as the basis of world exchange.

2. The United States is selfish in attempting, by putting the Dawes-plan German bank on a gold basis, to hasten the reutrn of a gold standard to Europe—because the United States wants, in this manner, to disgorge her gold and save herself from choking to death on it, economically and industrially speaking.

The pleasant plan proposed to checkmate this by the aforesaid group of minority experts, is to refuse gold from America, to send more gold to America—and let 'er choke!

THREE KILLED IN WRECK

Collision Between Work Train and Passenger Train in Georgia Results Fatally.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 19.—In a head-on collision today between a Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis passenger train and a work train, three trainmen were instantli killed and a score of passengers injured near Adairsville, Ga., according to reports here. Both engines were wrecked and the first few coaches of the passenger train derailed.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

A. H. Waterhouse, principal of the Lincoln high school, was elected principal of the Omaha high school, and it was understood that he would accept.

Major Charles W. Weeks returned from Fort Leavenworth where he passed the examination necessary to secure a commission in the regular army.

Lou Lon, a Chinese gardener living near Lincoln park, reported to the police that he had been robbed Sunday of $50, two revolvers, one gold chain and charm, a clock and some clothing.

Col. J. D. Calhoun, formerly of Lincoln, in 1899 editing the Tampa Herald in Florida, was receiving a boom politically. He had been repeatedly endorsed for governor and also for congressman.

Stores and other business places where women were employed were adjusting themsleves to the new law to take effect July 1, which made it illegal to employ female help more than ten hours a day.

The year before 2,500 people had camped on the assembly grounds at Lincoln park. Those preparing for the 1899 session expected even more.

REINHARDT FUNERAL HELD

Mile Long Procession to Cemetery at Funeral For Young Hamilton County Attorney.

AURORA, Neb., June 19.—In the presence of people from all over Hamilton county and from adjoining counties, John J. Reinhardt, county attorney, was buried Wednesday afternoon in Aurora cemetery. It was the largest funeral ever held in Hamilton county. The funeral procession of automobiles following the hearse was a mile long.

Rev. P. N. Shedd of the Presbyterian church delivered an eloquent eulogy on the life of the young attorney. The American Legion had charge of the funeral arrangements. The casket was covered with an American flag and banked about with flowery tributes from friends.

John J. Reinhardt came to Aurora in 1916 and had been county attorney for four years. He was unmarried. He leaves his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Reinhardt, of 1621 Q street, Lincoln, Neb., and three brothers, C. A. Reinhardt of Ottawa, Kas.; D. H. Reinhardt, of Bayard, Neb., and Leigh Reinhardt of Lincoln.

Acting upon the suggestion of a proclamation of Acting Mayor Charles A. Ronin, the business houses of the city were closed between the hours of 2 and 4 p. m.

SPEND COIN FOR PEACE.

RIO DE JANEIRO, (By mail)—Brazil should turn what money she might spend in additional armaments for military and naval improvement, into new railways and additional rolling stock for the railways she now possesses. Such was the contention expressed by Senator Azeredo upon taking over the duties of vice-president of Brazil's upper house of congress.

New Victor Records by McCormack and Paderewski

As examples of perfect tone production the voice of McCormack and the playing of Paderewski are really marvelous. As examples of what the Victor alone can offer, they are typical.

In making Victor Records Paderewski uses his own piano, knowing that the Victrola and Victor Records reproduce minutely tone, technique and individual artistry.

The amazing accuracy of reproduction in the records of these two great artists extends to all Victor Records when played upon the Victrola.

Red Seal Records

		Number	DOUBLE-FACED List Price
Marchéta (A Love Song of Old Mexico) (Schertzinger) / Indiana Moon (Davis-Jones)	John McCormack / John McCormack	1011	$1.50

Two numbers for which the public has set up an insistent call. And you should hear McCormack sing them! All the beauty of his voice is in these records.

Etude in C Sharp Minor (Chopin) Piano Solo / Mazurka in A Minor (Chopin) Piano Solo	Ignace Jan Paderewski / Ignace Jan Paderewski	6448	2.00

Two of the most subtly and profoundly poetic of Chopin's less-generally known compositions, played by the hand of a consummate master of the piano. Music in the highest and finest sense the word implies—and recording that such music deserves.

Melodious Instrumental

Wine, Woman and Song—Waltz (Strauss) / You and You Waltz (from "Die Fledermaus") (Strauss)	Victor Symphony Orchestra	35743	1.25

Viennese—or "old-fashioned"—waltzes, by a full symphony orchestra. Remarkable records, of splendid full volume and gorgeous tone-colors.

Light Vocal Selections

Oh! Eva / Hard Boiled Rose	The Happiness Boys / The Happiness Boys	19340	.75

First record by this combination of Billy Jones and Ernest Hare, who by their team name are well known to radio audiences. One of the cleverest and most irresistible vaudeville turns ever recorded, with a lively encore song.

Anchored / Out on the Deep	Wilfred Glenn / Wilfred Glenn	19315	.75

Sea-songs for the bass voice. The words are simple and familiar, but the music has the roll of the sea in it. Most of us know these numbers, but few have heard them as they are sung on this record.

Dance Records

It Had to Be You—Fox Trot / The Hoodoo Man—Fox Trot	Paul Whiteman and His Orchestra	19339	.75

New fox trots by this world-model organization. One of them brilliant, in the extreme; the other patterned all over with weird "hoodoo" figures. Characteristic Whiteman ingenuity is heard everywhere, brought out to perfection by Victor recording.

When Dixie Stars are Playing / Peek-a-Boo—Fox Trot with yodeling chorus / I Need Some Pettin'—Fox Trot	Barney Rapp and His Orchestra	19341	.75

The first number is a fine light-moving fox trot with some comedy yodel effects. The second is cheerful yet with sentiment, and the piano has some notable solo work. Both are splendidly recorded—a delight for dancing.

Nightingale—Waltz (vocal refrain and bird effects) / Sunrise and You—Medley Waltz (Introducing "Smilin' Through")	S. S. Leviathan Orchestra / The Troubadours	19342	.75

Two fine examples of the "American slow waltz." The first one with "two-tone" whistling effects and a vocal refrain; the second on two famous Arthur Penn melodies. Dance records of the kind for which the Victor is famous.

RUMPUS OVER MENTAL TURN

NORTH FOURTEENTH STREET IS IN A SULLEN MOOD

City Kicked West Half of Street Over to County in Order to Bring Paving Which is Now Skidding

The county commissioners will hold a reception next Tuesday and will have as their guests a lock of citizens from the Fourteenth street war. The commissioners changed their minds in regard to a proposed paving project extending north from Belmont avenue. They created a district on the west later and rescind the action. Now they propose to gravel the street and grade it not to the liking of owners of abutting property.

Some of the more unkind complain that Commissioner Bennett and County Clerk Morgan are the ones who tossed the monkey wrench. A meeting was held in the South church at Belmont Wednesday night and a committee of four appointed to carry the matter to the commissioners in Tuesday. Members of the group are W. T. Nelson, E. M. Rolofson, Dr. W. E. Slattery and Harry Goldstein. Ministers of the [illegible]

LATE NEWS OF YESTERDAY

NINETY DAY TRIAL ON TRAIN SERVICE

Northwestern Secures Permission to Make a Number of Changes in Southern Nebraska Lines.

The state railway commission gave verbal authority Wednesday afternoon to the Northwestern railroad to make a number of changes in its passenger train service in the southern territory, and will later follow this up with a written order. The commission and the railroad will make a ninety day trial of the new schedules. The Northwestern was in a hurry as it desired to make the changes effective Sunday.

Chairman Browne said that no hearing was ordered on the application for the reason that the railroad was in a hurry to make the changes at this time, and that no adverse comment had been received by the commission. Representatives of the road were asked to go about in the districts affected and see what the reaction was, and the only one the commission has was of a commendatory character.

Under the new schedules as authorized, the train out of Lincoln to Fremont will leave at 6:30 in the morning instead of 7:30; the train now leaving here at 1:30 in the afternoon will be discontinued, while the one leaving at 4 o'clock in the afternoon will carry a Pullman to Missouri Valley where it will connect with the Chicago train.

The service to Lincoln out of Fremont will be cut down one train also, that now reaching here at 11:59 being discontinued. The morning train out of Fremont now leaving at 7 o'clock will not depart from there until 8:20, arriving at Lincoln at 9:58. It will carry the Chicago Pullman it gets at Missouri Valley. The afternoon train out of Fremont will leave at 3:25 instead of 4:05, as now, reaching Lincoln at 5:15, or a half hour earlier than now.

The train service on the Hastings and Superior lines will be reversed from the present schedules. The train now leaving Fremont at 4:15 p. m. and reaching Hastings at 9:20 p. m. will leave at 8:30 in the morning, and reach Hastings at 1:10 p. m. The train in the other direction which now leaves Hastings at 10:15 in the morning and arriving at Fremont at 3:10, will leave at 12:45 p. m. and connect at Fremont at 5:30 with the Chicago train.

On the Superior line the train now leaving Linwood at 5:30 p. m. will leave at 9:35 a. m. and reach Superior at 2:20 p. m. instead of 10:20 p. m. as at present. The train north, now leaving Superior at 9:15 a. m. will not depart until 11:45 a. m. arrive at Linwood at 2:00 p. m. and Fremont at 3:10, where it connects with the 5:30 train from Hastings which gives the Chicago connection.

The Northwestern, in making these changes, is reaching out for a larger part of the long haul patronage to Chicago and other points east instead of depending upon the shrinking station to station income. This is done by cutting across country to and from Missouri Valley with the Chicago trains, instead of running them in and out of Omaha.

Train No. 11, now leaving Omaha at 7:55 will leave at 6:30 in the morning, connecting with the Lincoln train at Fremont, and arriving at Norfolk at 11:45 a. m. It stays there fifty-five minutes for dinner before departing for the west. The Winner branch train will leave Norfolk at 1 o'clock instead of 12:40 as at present.

ENGINEERS IN SESSION HERE

Want New Topographical Map of Country—California Makes Bid For Convention.

At a business meeting of the American society of Agriculture Engineers held at the Mechanical Engineering building of the university Wednesday evening a resolution was passed asking the members of the society to support the Temple bill in congress. This bill provides for the preparation of a topographical map of the entire country and will be a great boon to the profession, according to members of the society.

The meeting was presided over by President S. H. McCorry who also gave the annual report of the American Engineering Council. Raymond Olney gave the report of the secretary-treasurer, followed by the report of the research committee and the committee on agriculture data. The report of the national committee on the relation of electricity to agriculture was given by J. B. Davidson. The society's representative on the federal board of map making, J. R. Haswell, gave the report of his committee and the report of the Pacific coast section of the society was given by Prof. L. J. Fletcher of the University of California.

Following the reports of the various committees the question of a meeting place for next year was discussed. Prof. L. J. Fletcher of the University of California in behalf of the Pacific coast section, extended an invitation to the society to meet somewhere in California next year. Professor Fletcher maintained that in addition to having all of the kinds of machinery and modern devices used in agriculture in Nebraska and the east, it has great hydraulic plants, irrigation projects and some small farm implements such as the sub-soiler that are not so prevalent in the eastern states.

The meeting gave a rising vote of thanks to the University in general and to Prof. O. J. Sjogren in particular for the hospitality that had been shown them while in Lincoln.

About 150 agricultural engineers are in attendance at the convention. Twenty-four states are represented, also the federal department of agriculture and electric light and power. The annual address was given by S. H. McCrory, chief of the division of agricultural engineering, bureau of public roads. "Land as it Affects Agriculture and Particularly Agricultural Engineering," was the subject of the address.

SAYS VICTIM OF PASSION

Goucher Tells Supreme Court Public Was Inflamed and Fair Trial Impossible.

Charles R. Goucher, salesman for the Omaha Printing company, convicted in Lincoln county of aiding and abetting the county clerk, Arthur S. Allen, in forging a warrant or voucher for $845, filed with the supreme court Wednesday a brief of many pages, in which he asserts he was made the victim of a community maddened over the burning of the courthouse to cover up the misconduct of county officials. He says the court erred grievously in refusing to allow the case to be removed to another county. He gives a list of the number of inflammatory articles the newspapers printed and claims the jurors were prejudiced against him. W. E. Shuman, head of the taxpayers' league, who also helped to prosecute, wrote a number of the articles, he charges.

Allen testified that Goucher found himself short in his accounts with the Omaha Printing company, which did much business with the county, and asked Allen to issue this warrant. With the proceeds he would make good his shortage, Allen said, and then repay the county as he got the money. Goucher says this story is untrue, that he never was short, that the company never charged he was short and that he is still in its employ. He says no forgery was committed. He was sentenced to one year and to pay a $100 fine.

Pioneer of Nebraska Dead.

LOUP CITY, Neb., June 18.—Mrs. Adeline Wall, wife of Judge Aaron Wall, mayor of Loup City, quietly passed away at their home Tuesday, old age being given as the cause of her death. She was found dead in her bed when her husband attempted to wake her this morning.

Mrs. Wall was born in New York state in 1839 and was eighty-five years old at the time of her death. She was married to Judge Wall in 1869, and in 1877 they came to Sherman county where they have lived since then.

Mrs. Wall leaves to mourn her loss her husband, one son and one daughter, all of this place. The date of burial has not yet been decided.

BANANA PEEL IS CAUSE OF A SUIT

Richard Frederick Sues the Illinois Central for $25,000 Because He Slipped and Fell in Coach.

A banana peeling and a cuspidor in the aisles of a coach on a passenger train were instrumental in rendering Richard Frederick a cripple and in causing the Illinois Central railroad a $25,000 damage suit. Mr. Frederick filed suit in that amount in district court Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Frederick, in his petition, claims that on January 9, he bought a ticket to Memphis, Tenn., from New Orleans and boarded a train to make the trip. He states that the light was poor in the car in which he was riding and that the aisles were unclean and cluttered with refuse.

Mr. Frederick alleges that he got up from his seat and started to walk down the aisle, that he slipped on a banana peeling, lost his balance and fell, striking his shoulders on the arm of a seat and then fell to the floor, injuring his head on a cuspidor also left in the aisle.

He claims the railroad was negligent in not having its coaches properly lighted and in allowing the aisles of the cars to become unclean and unsafe. He claims that for ten days after his fall his limbs were paralyzed and that even yet the use of his limbs is greatly lessened because of the accident. For his injuries and disability he asks relief in the sum sought.

MERE MENTION.

Richard McClellan, 1035 Garfield street sustained bruises about the face and head Wednesday evening when he was thrown from his bicycle when caught in a jam with a car driven by S. F. Johnson of Cheney, Neb., and a street car at Tenth and K streets.

Doris I. Strayr received a divorce from Fred R. Strayer Wednesday afternoon on grounds of extreme cruelty and non-support. The couple were married June 24, 1923 in Council Bluffs, Ia. There are no children. Mrs. Strayers's maiden name, Doris Witt, was restored.

Edith Browning was given a divorce from Ercel Browning by Judge Frost Wednesday afternoon because of alleged acts of infidelity and association with dissolute women in other cities. The couple were married in Creston, Iowa, February 25, 1914. There is one child whose custody was given to the mother.

Edna Ola Cambridge was granted a decree of divorce from Albert E. Cambridge by District Judge Frost Wednesday afternoon on grounds of extreme cruelty. The four minor children were given into the custody of both parents. Mrs. Cambridge was given the custody of the youngest daughter and the husband the custody of the others. Mr. Cambridge was also ordered to pay $6 a week for the support of the child in his wife's custody. The house hold goods were given to Mrs. Cambridge.

PEOPLE YOU KNOW.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Meyer, Miss Anna Myer, Paul Myer and Joseph Myer have returned from Steinauer, where they attended the marriage of Francis Myer of Lincoln to Miss Eulalie Steinauer, daughter of Mrs. Theresa Steinauer, which took place Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock at St Anthony's church. The altar was beautifully decorated with ferns, roses, and peonies. Rev. Father Helmle of Ft. Wayne, Ind., uncle of the groom, officiated assisted by Rev. Adrian Sharkey of Lincoln. Mrs. Henry Rucker, aunt of the bride played Mendelsson's wedding march. The bride's only attendant was her sister, Kathryn, who wore a frock of powder blue with a picture hat of pink and carried a corsage of pink rosebuds. Joseph Myer, brother of the groom, served as best man. The bride's gown was of white satin trimmed in crystal beads. Her long veil of tulle arranged in cap shape effect was held in place by a band of crystal beads and rhinestones with rosettes of pearls at the sides. She carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies of the valley. A nuptial high mass was said following the ceremony. Paul Myer, brother of the groom, sang "Ave Maria" by Luzvi. A wedding breakfast at which places were laid for forty was served at the home of the bride. A basket of sweet peas tied with tulle was used as a centerpiece. The bride and groom left immediately for a two-weeks' trip to Colorado after which they will live in Beatrice.

Miss Blanch Garten left Wednesday evening for Estes Park to attend the national convention of Delta Gamma. Miss Garten, who is national installation officer, will meet the other officers of the national council in Denver and will go on to the park for a council meeting before the convention begins on June 23. Miss Garten expects to return to Lincoln about July 1.

FILES SUIT FOR DAMAGES

Verna E. Leach Asks $5,000 From Burlington for Alleged Injuries to Lungs.

Verna E Leach filed a $5,000 damage suit against the Burlington railroad in the district court Wednesday afternoon for injuries to his lungs alleged to have been received while he was employed in the Havelock shops.

Mr. Leach alleges that on September 15, 1923, he was working on a boiler near some workmen who were using an oxygen torch. He claims that as a result of the heat created by the torch, certain noxious and harmful gasses were released, which when inhaled were extremely harmful to the lungs and nasal passages.

The plaintiff claims that he told the foreman under whom he was working that he could not continue work under such conditions but the foreman refused to give him relief and he continued work until the close of the day.

On the following day Mr. Leach states he became seriously ill with pneumonia which was caused by the soreness of his lungs resulting from inhaling the gasses. Since then he has not been able to do work of any kind because of poor health, he states, and his health has been permanently impaired and he has been incapacitated from performing common labor, his only means of support.

MERE MENTION.

Albin Sand lodged an appeal Wednesday with the supreme court in an action which L. R. Brininger Co., of Alliance won in Box Butte county. Sand had a judgment against the National 5, 10 and 25 cent stores and levied on a stock of goods in Alliance, which Brininger replevined from the sheriff as its own property thru purchase in the due and regular course of business.

THIS WOMAN RELIEVED FROM SUFFERING

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A Remarkable Story

Dover, Del.—"I wish every woman would take your wonderful medicine as it has done so much good to me. I had cramps and faint spells and very bad pains. One day I was over to my neighbor's house and she told me I ought to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So I went to the store on my way home and got a bottle, and took the first dose before supper. I have been taking it ever since, and you can hardly believe how different I feel. I had just wanted to lie in bed all the time, and when I started to brush up I would give out in about ten minutes. So you know how badly I felt. I used to go to bed at eight and get up at seven, still tired. Now I can work all day and stay up until eleven, and feel all right all the time. My housework is all I do in summer, but in winter I work in a factory. I have told a good many of my friends, and I have had three come to me and tell me they wouldn't do without the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. SAMUEL MURPHY, 219 Cecil St., Dover, Delaware.

The Breath of the Avenue

Color is as important from a fashion standpoint as white.
White is important of course for a season without white would be like a summer without moonlight.
But white is not alone this summer as it was last year, but white fashions divide the honor with costumes in solid colors and in colorful prints and stripes and plaids.
Sometimes white is set off by a colored scarf-color on pipings and buttons, of applique, stripes and plaids. Some note of contrast should be present with white.
This the summer story of white is a story of white with a colorful foreground.

We Present

for your interest then, plenty of white footwear and fabrics featured in this advertisement with our June Wash Goods Sale offering you all the colored fabrics you will want to select from.

TWO VICTIMS OF A STORM

NORTH DAKOTA PROPERTY DAMAGE IS VERY LARGE.

Wind and Rain Beginning in Montana, Sweeps Eastward, Reaching Greatest Intensity at Dickinson.

ST. PAUL, Minn, June 19—Two were killed in North Dakota and inestimable property damage was done by a storm which swept across North Dakota and Minnesota early today.

Originating in Montana, the storm swept eastward, reaching its greatest intensity at Dickinson, in western North Dakota, where two were killed and twenty-one injured. Scores of buildings were wrecked at Dickinson and Eland.

Cloudburst which accomapnied the ninety mile wind washed out railorda embankments and highways, blocking traffic west on the coast line of the Northern Pacific and stoping the Soo line north of Bismarck.

Almost every building in Dickinson suffered damage. A camp of 400 at the chautauqua was drowned out by torrents of rain, and two injured when a tent collapsed. Joe Froelich, a farmer and John Freed, a dray line owner, were killed at Dickinson when a shed collapsed on them Both of their necks were broken Frolich leaves a widow and eight children.

ST. PAUL, Minn, June 19 — A violent wind and rain storm struck the twin cities of the northwest today, causing thousands of dollars' damage. Hundreds of basements were flooded. Electrical disturbances added to the fury of the storm.

Taking a path parallel to the one which killed twenty people and did millions of dollars' damage in South Dakota Saturday night, today's storm swept out of Montana, east across North Dakota and Minnesota down into Wisconsin.

Many buildings were destroyed at Dickinson and Eland, N. D, by the wind, according to reports to the Northern Pacific railroad here

A N P. extra freight train, east bound, piled up between Bismarck and Pierre where rain had washed out more than a mile of the track. Another washout blocked the Soo line north from Bismarck, between Bismarck and Wilton.

All the country between Fargo and Dickinson, almost the length of North Dakota was hard hit by the storm.

To Exhibit Judges' Portraits.

NEBRASKA CITY, June 19.—The work of collecting portraits of the eighteen district judges that have served Otoe county since 1855, has been completed by the local bar association and as soon as the photographs are framed, titled and dated, they will be hung on the walls of the historic court room in the Otoe county court house here. Most of the likenesses were furnished by relatives of the ex-judges. Some of the men attained considerable prominence after serving the district court, one climbing to the position of supreme court member.

RUSCO REMOVABLE TRANSMISSION BANDS FOR FORDS

matter of minutes, not hours

SAVES time and money when your bands need relining. The Rusco hinge makes it unnecessary to remove the transmission case. You do not have to disconnect the self-starter. Besides, they grip the drum evenly all round and therefore the lining wears three times as long as with ordinary bands.

CHAPTER XXI
The Footlights!

She had always imagined that once on she might forget the audience and think only of the dance, but in this she found she was wrong. The audience, quiet, watching, woven by her imagination into one great living creature, ready to acclaim or destroy, according to its wisdom, dominated her thoughts entirely. But, curiously enough, it did not frighten her now that she fronted it. Rather did it intrigue her. She wanted to see what she could do with it, whether she could sway it to her will, catch the fancy, please it.

The dance ended in what seemed an incredibly short space of time, and immediately came an outburst of applause. She withdrew, bowing and smiling, while yet they clapped.

Brunel himself threw her cloak about her shoulders.

"That was good. You pleased them." She went up to her dressing-room.

She went down for her second dance in a different frame of mind. The applause which had greeted the little fragment she had offered had steadied her and given her confidence, tho she knew that this second appearance was the great hazard, that thing which must make or break her. In the first act she had shown that she was a good dancer. In the second she had to prove that she was great.

Afterwards, when the account of that second appearance was written for the newspapers, it was called the Triumph of La Phalene.

The slow, haunting music, the half-lights, the lyrical movements of the dancer, movements in which there was poetry and music unexpressed by the orchestra, gripped the audience, so that it sat still, strained and silent.

There was a pathos in it which no words could ever have told and no brush have portrayed. All the soul of Elise was in it, her fears and her despair She stripped her thoughts and her emotions for the multitude to see, and in the stripping she made them understood

The music drooped and died at last. The dim lights dimmed still further. From twilight the stage became darkened. The dancer seemed to melt into nebulous space at the back of the stage, her hands outflung appealingly.

The curtain dropped.

It came like a clap of thunder on the stillness of a summer's night—applause, appalling in its volume, rolling to the stars above the theatre, crashing on the ears of Elise, as the lights on the stage lept up and the curtain lifted to disclose her.

She came forward, trembling, bowing, smiling, hardly aware of herself. Brunel was beside her, holding her hand and bowing towards her. Bouquets were being handed up, and she gathered them, dropped them, and gathered them again.

She heard Brunel speaking—a few well-chosen sentences, with thanks as their dominant note, and an excuse for her inability to respond to their requests for a speech. Yet still they demanded it, and at last she stepped to the edge of the stage. Silence came down on the place.

She stammered something, words which seemed to her incoherent.

"Thank you," she said at last. "Thank you."

The curtain dropped again while their applause rang out afresh, and behind it Brunel turned to her, his eyes alight, his cheeks unwontedly flushed.

"It is triumph!" he said. "It is triumph!"

CHAPTER XXII.
The Sincerest Flattery.

Lolette lounged in bed, lounged on silk, black silk, with a vivid, Oriental kimono about her shoulders. At the bedside was a little ebony table—for ebony was Lolette's favorite wood, a wood made by the gods, it seemed, to set off her flaming beauty—and on the table were the articles of petit dejeuner, the exquisite silver coffee utensils, the fragile cup, the rolls. From the corner of her twisted mouth depended a slender black cigaretteholder, and the smoke of a Russian cigarette wreathed up about her brushed-out hair.

She tossed aside the seventh newspaper she had scanned that morning. They lay on the floor at the foot of the bed, all around her, crumpled, some of them torn viciously, all defaced by her slim white hands and her rage.

For each and every one of them blazed forth the triumph of La Phalene. It was stupendous and it was incredible. In a night this simpering Puritan had leaped to the stars More than one of the journals described her as the greatest dancer in the world All of them voiced her praises in no uncertain way

Lolette sat very still when the last of the papers was tossed in a ball to the floor, sat with her hands clasped about her knees under the silkiness of the bed clothes, and stared thru the wreath of smoke at the silver and gray tapestry of the wall

Like all her kind, she was vain to the degree of folly It had been outside the pale of her calculations that ever there could exist her equal as a dancer—to say nothing of her superior. She was Lolette—the premiere danseuse It filled the world for her and blinded her sight to every other possibility. There had been but one Lolette. There could never be another

And yet—there was La Phalene, come like the sun over the edge of the unknown, dimming the lustre of the moon, yet high in the heavens but like to die as the new light spread across the world.

Lolette watched the overlong ash from her cigarette drop on to the silken coverlet with eyes which did not consciously see the happening All this was such a shock that she felt stunned and helpless For she herself had created this creature which was likely to destroy her, she herself had set La Phalene's feet on the steep pathway to fame.

Truly Parisian, she could appreciate the irony of this to the full. She had wrought for this girl's undoing, and, instead, she had handed her success beyond her wildest dreams Where she had planned for the chorus and shame, she had endowed Elise with wealth and fame What mattered it now if Brunel marked his will? What mattered it how Elise lived? For the amours of a star were, as Lolette knew from experience, like the amours of a great king in the days when kings were really kings—above all criticism.

Her maid came in. Monsieur le Comte de Mordac had called and wondered if madame would receive him Lolette ordered him to be shown up, and he came into the room, dressed with a scrupulous care which defeated its object, very smooth and suave, with a little sly smile lurking about his lips.

He kissed the hand Lolette held out to him, and seated himself on a chair by the bedside

"Well—cherie," glancing round, "you have been studying the news, I perceive."

Lolette nodded. Her wildly beautiful face was beautiful no longer, but appeared to Mordac like a white, contorted mask expressing a nameless evil which almost frightened him, despite his poise.

"Curse them!" she said. "Brunel! All. Cochons!"

Mordac shrugged his shoulders. "You are unreasonably annoyed. One must not grumble when one's schemes go slightly awry."

"Schemes!" She flared at him "Are you laughing at me? By the good ——" Her hand shot out towards the coffee pot.

Mordac put his forearm before his face. "Cherie! Cherie! I have not created La Phalene. I have but come to console, and to talk to the woman who is still the most beautiful in all Paris It is not seemly to throw coffee pots at one's friends."

Lolette sank back against the pillow. "I shall finish with that Brunel," she said. "You hear? I shall appear no more at the Internationale. I shall finish. He has betrayed me—utterly."

"That is foolish, Cherie. Why cease to take Brunel's money? Why cut off that adorable nose to spite the face of the little dresser?"

"Dresser!" The word rearoused Lolette. "Dieu de Dieu! To think! To contemplate it!" She evinced signs of returning uncontrolled rage. "That slut whom I lifted from the gutters, who, but for me, would have been on the outer boulevards, should presume—dare——!" She choked with anger, glaring, and Mordac prepared to dodge the coffee-pot, or, at least, to see it flung at the great oval mirror above the dressing table.

She cooled. "She is no good," she said. "She is no good. I know Brunel, and I know all those pigs who write in the newspapers. It is just publicity, a boom Brunel wants his money back. He thinks to get it. He is building on sand. She is no good. It is impossible that she can be all they say. Impossible!"

Mordac listened in silence. This, he reflected, was the sincerest form of flattery. That Lolette should attempt to belittle Elise's performance that she should hate Elise and the man who made her, showed fear, and fear like this was praise indeed. Even the newspapers had failed to pay such a tribute to La Phalene as Lolette was, at that moment, paying

"Do you think she is any good?" Lolette flung the question at Mordac after an interval of silence, and, for once, he was unprepared.

"I have not seen her," he said, not realizing that he should have given a direct negative

The yellow eyes dulled, with their heavy lids dropped over them so that they showed to him like narrowed pools of suspicious light

"So! Listen, mon ami. In the past, when that—that—when she was my dresser, you found many smiles for her I forgave them. I ignored them because I thought you would not stoop so low But now—she is La Phalene. You understand? It is different"

She paused, changed wonderfully, her vicious face transfigured by something beautiful which flowered somewhere in her dark soul.

"You know, cherie, I love you. That there are many men about me but of them all you are my man, the one man I would follow, always. So—the little dresser is dead. You need never know La Phalene."

"Of course not," said Mordac, and tried to speak with a great sincerity.

But in the ears of this strange woman who loved him his words rang false, so false that they struck her as a lance-point might have struck her.

The beauty died from her face so that it was haglike, with twisted crimson lips, all snarling.

"I know!" she panted fiercely. "You remember all the time that I came from the Butte You say to yourself this is but an incident. This woman is nothing. Yet, there is something else for you to remember—my darling. Up in the Butte we kill—we kill for hate, but we also kill for love—for love. You will remember that—hein?"

Mordac smiled, though he did not feel like smiling

"It is a beautiful morning," he said, "and there is no need to talk of things so unpleasant. May I call in an hour and drive you thru the Bois? We could lunch out there at Massonier's. And we will forget all this."

Lolette nodded a moody assent. "Yes. Smother me with your presents and your smooth talk. Keep on. Keep on. But remember what I have said. And forget the little dresser. I will come."

She was nearer to tears than Mordac had ever seen her during that section of her tempestuous life with which he was familiar.

He withdrew, and, out on the pavement, he stopped to light a cigaret. His hands were trembling.

"Dieu!" he muttered. "But there is danger in all this. Why will women fall in love? Yet—tonight I shall see La Phalene for myself."

DAILY MAGAZINE PAGE FOR EVERYBODY

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

The Trick That Delivered Madge Into the Hands of the Gang.

I THANKED my particular little joss that Mamie's slowness of thought had kept the knowledge of my possession of the small revolver from the men on the truck until I had gained the precarious shelter the body of my small car afforded.

I crouched lower behind it, leveled the small silencer revolver directly at the foremost man and said distinctly:

"Yes, and I have you covered. Don't make any mistake, either. I'm not afraid to use it."

I would not have recognized my own voice, so raucous it was, and with some detached part of my brain I wondered from whence I obtained the nerve to speak at all. It appeared to be the most foolhardy thing in the world thus to defy men whom I could hope to hold off but a few minutes at the longest, but there seemed to be a psychic little voice somewhere within my consciousness insistently sounding the message:

"Keep them guessing as long as you can! Don't give up!"

There was a loud laugh from one of the men at my challenge, but I noticed hopefully that it was not shared by the others, nor did it have the insouciant note which the other guffaw held. It was quickly silenced by the smallest of the men, evidently the leader, who said venomously:

"Shut up, you fool, or I'll give you the chance of going over and taking that rattle away from that baby."

An Unexpected Attack.

There was no answer to this proposition, and with a little thrill of triumph, I realized that even though I was a woman, no one of them was anxious to take a chance at the revolver in my hand. The bubble of my vanity, thus inflated, was quickly punctured, however, when the leader went on in a tone evidently not meant for me, but which was caught by my ears, sharpened preternaturally by danger.

"She's a blasted sight more dangerous than if she could shoot straight—you never know where a woman's going to aim, she never knows herself, and then when she gets through aiming she shoots in the opposite direction. We've got to rush her someway."

"There'll be three of you gone before you 'rush' me," I called defiantly, and had the small satisfaction of seeing them start apart in amazement that I had overheard them.

Their silence was followed by a torrent of profanity and gutter invective so coarse and menacing that I felt myself sicken with rage and humiliation at being obliged to listen to it. A minute later I was to realize that the language, together with their motions of anger, had been deliberately staged, for one of the men disappeared from the group without my knowing it—he must have dropped to the ground and crawled beneath the machine—and even as I strained my eyes counting the men before me, wondering whether or not I had deceived myself as to their number, my feet were seized by someone beneath the car and jerked violently forward.

"Can the Comedy!"

Thrown off my balance, I frantically clutched at the car, and though I could not avert a bad fall, I think I was saved an ugly fracture of the skull by my clutch of the car, and the fact that I previously had drawn the machine to one side of the road. If I had fallen on the concrete instead of the earth, I am afraid I might never have known what had happened to me.

As it was, I was badly bruised, and for a few seconds I almost lost consciousness, although I was aware of a cruel grip on my arms, and a voice saying:

"Handle that gat carefully, Bill! It's a queer kind."

I tried to struggle to my feet, and at my movement, the men holding my arms jerked me roughly to an upright position.

"Want a little action, do you?" one of them sneered brutally.

"Can the comedy, Ed!" another voice struck in, and I shivered involuntarily at the sound of it, for it held an icy note of finality more terrifying than the roughness of the other men. "We haven't any time for fooling," the voice went on. "We've got to make up our minds what to do with this dame. She knows altogether too much."

"Bump her off, that's the easiest and quickest way out," one of the men suggested in an off-hand way that betrayed how little human life meant to him.

"Of course," the other man sneered. "Did you think I meant to take her to the movies? But we've got to go somewhere else than here with her. Gag her quick and throw her in the truck before somebody comes along."

YOUR HEALTH

Beware of Dampness and Conserve Your Health

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

THERE are almost as many theories of health as there are doctors. Each of us, whether doctor or layman, has views on the causes of this or that disease.

Along comes Sir James Cantlie, of England, with some new ideas. Lecturing on "The Health of Professional Men," at the Institute of Hygiene, he presented his original views.

Sir James insists that dryness of the body is essential to health. Warmth is not enough. To escape rheumatism, he says, the body must be protected against dampness. Deafness, he believes, is caused by damp pillows.

Sir James has investigated and has to his own satisfaction proved that bed clothing absorbs moisture all day and then your clothing, hung on the chair, is absorbing moisture all night. Consequently your body is always in contact with moist materials.

When as a boy I used to make a Winter visit to my grandmother in the country, it was a moment of excitement when she took down the brass warming-pan. Of course it was a signal that the time had come to go to bed, but I was reconciled because it was thrilling to see Grandmother fill the pan with glowing coals. Then, in solemn procession I led the way with the candle, while she marched up the stairs to apply the pan to the cold and clammy sheets.

If there is any question about the effect of the warming-pan on my youthful health, I can testify that my youthful comfort was materially benefited by its use.

If you never placed your shivering form between the sheets of a bed just under the roof of a one-and-a-half-story house, when the temperature was thirty-two degrees below zero, you don't know how different is this experience from getting into the delicious warmth of a bed prepared by the warming-pan.

I taught school in the country one Winter and slept in a room where the water pitcher froze solid every night. Sir James may be a crank, but many a country boy would like to have his views adopted by every home.

It is bad for sleep and bad for health to get into a bed shivering and to continue to shiver for hours. Cold and moisture in the sheets will add to this uncomfortable experience. There can be no doubt that the resistance of the body to the germs of disease is lowered during this experience. This may give the germs an opportunity to start their miserable work.

I fear I cannot travel the whole route with Sir James Cantlie. No matter how dry the sheets when you go to bed, the moisture of the skin is sure to be imparted to the lines of the sheets and very soon they are moist. But clothing or bedding that is damp to the touch should not be placed next to the body. It will chill the surface and lead to trouble.

I firmly believe that dry feet are essential to health. Most persons hate rubbers and won't wear them. This is wrong. Unless you provide an extra pair of shoes at your place of business, you make a mistake if you do not wear rubbers, to escape the necessity of going about all day with moist feet.

Dryness and warmth of the body are important factors in promoting health. It is not a good thing to wet the hair every time it is combed. To do so leads to chilling of the scalp and the development of catarrh. Damp pillows would have the same effect.

Let us keep dry and warm for the sake of good health.

MRS. M. O. Q.—Will it harm the hair and cause it to lose its color to use sulphur and egg as a wash for the hair?

A.—I doubt if it will harm the hair, but why not use soap and water?

M. D. Q.—How often should I take Blaud's Iron Pills?

A.—As a tonic, take Blaud's Iron Pills—any druggist will compound them—five grain, one after each meal; but before taking them talk with your doctor.

J. O. Q.—What is the food value of mushrooms?

A.—Mushrooms have a slight food value.

A. B. B. Q.—I am a woman thirty years of age, height five feet one inch. What is my correct weight?

A.—The average weight of a woman of your age and height is about 123 pounds.

MISS B. S. Q.—Can you advise me as to what will make my face plump? It is rather long and thin.

A.—This is a natural condition with some people, just as others have naturally round, full faces. If you are slender otherwise, a general gain in weight would probably correct this condition. For full particulars on this subject, kindly send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Good Night Stories

BETTY PEEKS INTO A HOME WITHOUT FLOORS.

"OH, dear," Betty grumbled when her mama asked her to sweep and dust the dining-room. "I just wish we lived in a house that never had to be swept or dusted."

"Do you think you'd like that kind of a house?" asked a soft voice. Betty turned quickly, and there right behind her stood the little travel elfin, Gocomeback. "Are you quite sure you'd enjoy living in a house without floors?" he asked gently.

"I never heard of a house without floors," said Betty, and she had to laugh because Gocomeback's black eyes twinkled so merrily. "Is there really such a house, Gocomeback?"

"Goodness, yes, plenty of them," he replied. "Why, in one house I know of the family wouldn't know what a broom or a dust-mop was for."

"Really!" exclaimed Betty. "How nice it must be to live in such a house! I'd like to see one——"

Before she could finish her sentence, Betty found herself standing in a queer-looking place. It looked like a huge piece of canvas looped around a bundle of sticks that came out of a hole in the top.

"Here's where the South American Indians live," whispered Gocomeback. "Bright Eyes, Bright Eyes," he called, and in response a happy brown face peered out from under the flap of the tent-house. "Come here and meet Betty. She thinks she would like to live in a house like yours."

Bright Eyes, a pretty little Indian girl, just about Betty's age, opened the flap door and invited Betty into her tent-house.

"No wonder they never use brooms and dust-mops," Betty laughed when she saw the sandy floor. Bright Eyes laughed when Gocomeback told her why he had brought Betty to see her.

"And you haven't any furniture either, have you?" asked Betty.

"Not any of the kind that you use," replied the Indian girl. "Our beds are simply piles of twigs with a skin of some kind spread over them. We never have to sweep or dust because we have no floors, chairs or tables like yours."

"I think I'd rather sweep and dust a hundred rooms a day than always live on sand floors," exclaimed Betty. "Where do you cook and eat?"

"On nice days, we cook on a bonfire out-of-doors," replied Bright Eyes. "When it's raining we cook on a bonfire in the center of the tent. We sit on the sand and eat from our laps."

Betty shook her head. Her slippers were filled with sand and it hurt her toes. But when she turned to Gocomeback to complain, everything vanished, and Betty found herself standing in her own front yard.

She emptied the sand from her slippers, then ran laughing into the house. Betty swept and dusted not only the dining-room, but the living-room and kitchen as well. She never again complained about floors or furniture.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my teens. I have been going with a young man four years my senior for a year and a half. But ever since a little quarrel we had, he has been going with a very dear girl friend of mine who seems like a sister to me. He now wants me back again. I am afraid of spoiling my friendship with this girl if I go with him again.

I love them both dearly, although neither of them regarded my feelings while going together. They both played against me.

What shall I do? Which one's feelings should I regard? Can I trust either? BILLY.

BILLY: The situation isn't as serious as you are making it, my dear. There is no reason why the young man shouldn't keep you both as his friends. Also you can keep the friendship of the girl after you renew your friendship with the young man. You have no claim upon one another since you are not engaged, you see. They did not "play against" you. They did a very natural thing.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl nineteen years old. Although I try to be as pleasant as I can, I seem to be very unpopular with men. They like to "kid" me along for a while, but when the novelty of that wears off, they are very cool toward me. This hurts me very much. They never ask to take me out, and if I'm ever in a mixed crowd I'm always the wall-flower. I try my hardest to be a congenial, good sport, and I'm well liked by the girls.

Don't you think a girl has to have subtler methods to get men than just being pleasant and congenial?

I've never had a man friend, and I'm a natural girl, so I want one.

UNPOPULAR.

UNPOPULAR: Let men "kid" you, if you wish, but show them that you have some intelligence and can do more than just amuse them for a few minutes. Don't shrink from men or keep in your mind always the thought that you are unpopular. Just forget about that and about yourself completely. Make an effort to interest the men you meet by—and here's the secret—showing that you are interested in them not as men, necessarily, for then you will be thought somewhat of a flirt, but as persons.

Write me again, won't you, and tell me how successful you have been.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her in care of this office.

FAMOUS "FIRSTS"

Brief Stories of the Men and Women Who Led the Way

By MARK STUYVESANT

How Insurance Came Into Being.

THE importance insurance has assumed in modern life is almost incalculable. There are few men who do not insure their lives in favor of dependents. Insurance against accident, fire, loss of ships at sea, loss of voice, of limbs, of household goods, jewelry and money, against robbers, and in the case of automobiles against damages done by collision as well as theft—these things are general.

But who began insurance, and which form is the oldest? Curiously enough, it is marine insurance that antedates all, for it dates from early days of the Greek colony of Rhodes, five hundred years before Christ.

In Rhodes it became the custom for a number of men to advance money to be paid back with big interest if a voyage was successful, but not to be repaid if the ships were lost at sea.

Direct marine insurance for a premium began as far as is known in Belgium in 1300, and within a hundred years rates and chances of loss at sea were stabilized in various European countries.

Next came fire insurance, which started in London after the great fire of 1666. Within twenty years several companies were selling fire insurance and which proved profitable.

But the big problem was insuring lives. The uncertainty of human existence, the complete absence of anything like mortality statistics, caused this form, now the most important by far and the greatest benefit to man, to lag.

A man named William Gibbons was insured at the Royal Exchange in 1583 for about 400 pounds for an 8 per cent premium for the term of one year. He died within the term and the insurers had to pay. That was enough of that, and no more was heard of life insurance for over a hundred years. Then a group of men formed what corresponded to modern fraternal insurance, which suffered various vicissitudes before being extinguished.

It was Edmund Halley, the great astronomer, who may be said to have founded life insurance. He sought for a long time for some means of estimating the prospective life of man, but he was handicapped because cities did not keep a record of the age of persons who died.

It happened that the city of Breslau in Silesia did keep such records and Halley secured copies of the register for five years from 1687 to 1691, including 6193 births and 5869 deaths. There was no census of the city, but he made a guess at the population and computed how many children out of a thousand, taken at the age of one, will die in each succeeding year. This was the first mortality table.

Halley discovered the comet which bears his name, but as far as mankind is concerned he did far more good by his mortality table. Upon it insurance rates could be based.

In 1746, a Frenchman issued a table based upon the records of certain religious associations in Paris and these were more accurate because he had exact population to base his deductions upon.

The first real life insurance company was the Equitable of London, which started in 1755. The Carlisle table, based upon the population of an English town, succeeded the Breslau and Tontine tables, but it was still far from accurate. The errors of these tables worked in favor of the companies, allowing them to charge a higher rate than was necessary, which made them prosperous.

The so-called "American Table" was brought into use in 1868, and this has stood the test of time. It has been modified and improved by the experience gained through the vast growth of the business of life insurance during the last half century.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"

By WANDA BARTON

Many of the Newest Linens Are Exceedingly Colorful.

THE influence of our closer contact with the peasantry of other nations through their handiwork, and perhaps a little of our own American Indian influence in the field of bright colors, have had their effect in making us a colorful people this season. Whether we shall remain so is a question only to be answered by fashion. But let us be gay while we may and while the foolish season is upon us.

Table linens of the fine but unbleached variety are being embellished with large, colored monograms. These are especially attractive in rustic designs. They are placed on the corners of the napkins where they show when the napkins are folded. On the cloth, they appear eighteen or twenty inches from the centre at either side, so as to lie between the edge of the centerpiece and the carver's cloth or serving dish. In some instances, they are of six-inch size and are done in the middle, in which case they are not covered by an extra centerpiece.

We also have a return of the old, colored, damask cloth, which, though it is still familiar to the older generation of housewives, has a few new touches now such as an embroidered, scalloped edge or a knotted, fringed edge, where it used to be a hand-hemmed affairs. Of course, the napkins are finished to match. Where initials are used, they are done with white linen floss rather than in color, the cloth itself being colorful enough.

Another revival is the white damask cloth with the colored border. The borders come in many old designs, such as the Grecian key, rustic log and laurel leaf. But there are many new ones also. In a Summer cottage or bungalow, where tablecloths seem to be still used, these linens are very popular. Doilie sets seem to be used only at luncheon time. There is no denying the fact that the covered table is always homey and cozy.

It seems almost a sacrilege to use the candlewick spreads that our grandmothers labored so hard to make. But the machine-made ones are certainly pretty. They come in plain white or done with colors on a white ground and are lovely for the Summer home. The so-called "Dolly Madison" spreads, having a plain stripe and a crinkled stripe alternately, come in all the dainty colors with scalloped edges. The best thing about them is the fact that in laundering they do not have to be ironed or mangled.

White cotton spreads with dainty chintz borders are very English in appearance but they are pretty on the beds and do up nicely. Some of the spreads are long enough to use as a throw to cover bed, pillows and all. White dimity spreads are to be had at prices to suit all buyers, from under five dollars up to the French embroidered ones at a hundred and fifty dollars. These old-fashioned new spreads have never been out of fashion and have varied but little in design with the passing years. The cheaper ones are heavier and do not require an under-spread of colored silk or cambric as do the finer ones.

Not only dainty guest towels are embroidered, but those used daily by the family. Hemmed by hand or hemstitched they are further decorated by cross-stitch motifs in colors or in a single color. In making these towels, one will find it more economical to buy the huck by the piece instead of in lengths. The towels may be cut in the lengths liked best with full allowance made for hems. Applied, colored hems are a fad of the period and are joined to the towels with hemstitching, then the work above is done in the color that matches the hem.

Bath-towels have not escaped the color craze and are quite gorgeous. They boast applied colored hems and large, embroidered initials. Kitchen towels bring up the vanguard. They come in line plaids, hemmed by hand then ornamented with cross-stitch motifs of forks, spoons, dishes, cups, saucers, ladles, gridirons and other appropriate motifs.

Towels for the chambermaid's cleaning basket are in large, dark plaids to distinguish them from those used in the kitchen.

Diary of a Fashion Model

She Chats About the Very Newest Lingerie.

AS soon as warm weather is in sight, we manikins get very busy making underwear in our spare moments.

"It is really very smart of us to sew while we are sitting about chatting," Pam remarked.

I glanced over to where she sat on a low stool, a fluffy bit of white sewing on her lap.

"Just what are you making?" I asked.

Pam held it up.

I saw that the sheer cloud of white took the form of a combination.

"Getting ready for warm, Summer days?" I asked.

"That's just what I'm doing," Pam admitted.

"You see I wear silk bloomers and shirts during the Winter, but I usually change into Summer materials as soon as the warm months come around," Pam explained.

"I do think the plain combinations are cooler than shirts and panties," I agreed.

"This looks cool enough, doesn't it?" Pam asked, as she held it up for inspection.

I admitted that the material was sheer enough to avoid being warm.

"What is it?" I asked.

"Batiste," Pam told me.

"I saw some like this in the window of a very exclusive underwear shop," she explained.

"You see, there are pleats down either side of the front and back," she said. "At the outside of each of these groups I am running some plain net edging, putting it on slightly fulled."

"Most effective. Is it difficult to do?" I asked.

"Not at all," Pam assured me. "At least not for me, because I love doing it."

The deep band at the top is also of net but this time it has an embroidered design traced over its surface," she continued.

"I like the combination of narrow net edging and the deeper banding," I commented.

"I'm using two-toned ribbon in blue and lavender for the straps," Pam continued. "And there are tiny roses of the ribbon at either side of the front."

"I can't imagine anything more effective than blue and lavender roses!" I commented.

"Why don't you grow ambitious and start on some pretty underthings?" Pam asked.

"I don't know but that I shall," I replied. "What material shall I use?"

"Cross-barred dimity is best for every day," Pam answered.

FRIDAY, JUNE 20.

The stellar operations for this day presage a very active and auspicious state of affairs in all lines of endeavor. In all mercantile and professional transactions, there should be felt the friendly rule of Mercury-trine Luna as well as the benefic assistance of Jupiter by lunar and mutual aspect. There may be opportunity for sudden and advantageous change or journey, which should be embraced with confidence. Money and business should increase and expand, yet there may be some danger of duplicity. Those in the employment of others should be careful in every way.

Those whose birthday it is have the prospect of a fortunate year in which there may be expansion in business and growth in wealth and opportunity. Change should be to advantage, although there may be some danger of deception. Those in the employment of others should be careful in all their movements. A child born on this day will be talented, versatile, successful in its undertakings and fortunate.

Their First House Party.

With the assistance of Mrs. Wellington Reed, the next door neighbor who had shown the business-girl-bride so many short cuts in housework and taught her to make her first light biscuits, layer cakes and pies, Mr. and Mrs. George Manton gave their first house party to their business friends.

"I want you to make the tea biscuits and the cake," whispered George when the housekeeper was out of hearing; "you have her skinned to a frazzle and I want some of my office friends to see what a gem of a wife I have!"

"Perhaps I better come over and watch you beat the biscuits," suggested Mrs. Reed when Jane told her what George had said. "Even experienced housekeepers have bad luck sometimes and I want to see that you show off well before that little Lulu Garrison. When she tastes one of your orange layer cakes and bites into one of your cream puffs she'll see you made no mistake in quitting a desk and probably get married as soon as she can arrange matters with Cupid."

And Mrs. Wellington Reed not only watched Jane Winslow Manton prepare for her first house party but saw to it that there was not a flaw nor a catch in the whole affair. It was a week-end party, every one arriving Saturday afternoon and remaining over Sunday, and altho Mrs. Reed arranged flowers, talked to the guests and even drove several about in her machine, no one suspected that she had anything to do with the culinary end of things.

"Jane made these biscuits!" proudly announced George Manton. "Have another piece of real home-made cake, gentlemen. My housekeeper always made soggy cake, but Jane's is as light as a feather!"

"It's wonderful!" admitted Lulu Garrison. "Come around to my bachelor suite some time, Jane, and teach me the art. If you can do it I know I can."

They danced, hiked, motored, played mah-jongg and were as merry a party as any business set of friends who get together over the week-end to romp and play. It was not until George had taken several of his office pals around to see the golf course Sunday afternoon that Jane Winslow Manton knew why she former "boss" begged off from joining the party and said he would prefer to sit on the veranda with the bride.

"See here, Jane Winslow," he said suddenly, not even including the newly acquired "Manton." "I'm in a dickens of a hole and you've got to come back to the office for a week or so. Your assistant has left and I can't find anybody who knows where to find anything. "I'm lost!"

"Oh you wouldn't want me to give up all this," she waved her hand out at the green foliage and freshly cut lawn, "at this season of the year. That's nonsense, there are plenty of clever girls who can do the work!"

"Just for one week to train in another girl!" pleaded her old employer.

"All right, just one week then," she said wearily.

THINK REPUBLIC TO STAND

German Leaders Believe That Democratic government is Lasting One.

(Copyright, 1924 by United Press)

BERLIN, June 19.—The republic in Germany is destined to stay in power—at least for some time.

That, in a word, is the consensus of thought of politicians in Germany, as gleaned from a series of interviews given the United Press. Even dyed-in-the-wool monarchists like Deputy R. Wulle, fascisti leader, admit that a monarch for all the Germans is lacking. Hence, no monarchy can momentarily be erected, even if an overwhelming call were at hand. And, this does not exist at present, as the recent elections showed. They showed many thousands of Germans swinging toward monarchism, but the bulk still firm in the basis of democracy.

At the other end of the line, Deputy Friedrich Stampfer, socialist, editor of "Vorwaerts," vows that Germany's workers—"unbending republicans"—would put an end within a fortnight to any attempt to restore a monarchy. Between the ultra-reactionary Wulle, and the socialist, Stampfer, are men like Count Bernstorff, democrat, former ambassador to America, and Deputy Isenburg, democrat, who say only a continuance of French revenge policy could swing the nation to monarchy.

Editor George Bernhard of the Vossische Zeitung is of the opinion that the nationalists in seeking entrance to the new government really intended a blow against the republic. He warns republicans to be on their guard.

Prince Bismarck, nationalist, youngest member of the parliament declined a statement of his position, but it can be said that at least he is not a devotee of Kaiser Wilhelm II., who threw out of power Bismarck's grandfather, the iron chancellor.

The government itself is confident that the republic will stand. In fact, it foresees that, as in France, the democracy ideal will grow with time.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING.

ALMA, Neb. June 19.—The fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr and Mrs. John C. Mitchell was celebrated at the home Monday by a dinner to which all immediate relatives were invited. Mr. and Mrs Mitchell have the distinction of having been married and having spent their entire married life in Alma. Seven children were born to them, five of whom were present Monday Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mock, Mrs. Mildred Eaton of Belle Fouche, S. D.; Jasper Mitchell of Wymore, Neb., Harry Mitchell of Republican City, Neb., and Mrs. Philip Everson of Alma, were the five children present, besides sixteen grandchildren and one great grand child. Mr Mitchell is seventy-eight years old and Mrs. Mitchell is seventy.

FIRES ARE UNDER CONTROL

Block Threatened Destruction of West Portal of the Moffatt Tunnel.

WEST PORTAL, MOFFAT TUNNEL, Colo., June 19.—Forest fires which raged here during the night, threatening destruction of the west portal of the Moffatt tunnel and Colorado's heaviest forested area, were believed under control otday.

Mountaineers and residents of Frazer, small town near here, fought desperately to prevent further outbreaks.

The fire started at a tourists camp near Fowler, Col. Six square miles of forest were consumed. At one time it was feared the blaze would reach the tunnel where tons of explosives were stored.

A two count charge of illegal sale of liquor was filed against Ben Crouch, 135 South Tenth, who was arrested Wednesday by state men in connection with six other youths who were fined $100 and costs during the first part of the week on similar charges. Crouch said he would plead guilty to the two counts thus laying himself liable to a $200 fine. He is a marble setter and was employed at the state capital. Max Deham also faces a charge of illegal sale of liquor.

The Coor divorce case in which Robert P. Corr hotly contests his wife, Pearl's, charges of extreme cruelty, non-support and false accusations of infidelity, continued trial before Judge Shepherd Thursday morning. Evidence adduced at the morning hearing indicated that Mrs. Corr despite her pleas of innocence, had been receiving men callers over and extended period. A decree of separate maintainance was granted Mrs. Corr last July by Judge Morning but dissatisfied, she now seeks absolute divorce.

NEBRASKA SHOWS LOW RATE.

Nebraska is one of twenty-four states whose white city dwelling wage-earners showed a lower tuberlosis death rate than the general urban industrial population of the United States, according to death claim figures just compiled by the Metropolitan Life. The tuberculosis death rate for the United States was 90.5 per 100,000 white industrial policyholders, while that for Nebraska was 41.3.

PEOPLE YOU KNOW.

The executive mansion of Nebraska was the scene of its first wedding Thursday afternoon, when the marriage of Miss Marylouise Bryan, daughter of Governor and Mrs. Bryan to William Ernest Harnsberger of Ashland, son of W. A. Harnsberger was solemnized at 4 o'clock. Large baskets of pink and white roses and a profusion of blue larkspur and spring garden flowers arranged about the rooms formed the only decorations. Rev. W. T. Elmore, pastor of the First Baptist church, read the marriage service in the presence of three hundred guests, including many relatives and intimate friends from over the state. Preceding the ceremony, Miss Evelyn Hartley of Kansas City, sang "When" by Earl Benham and "I Love Thee" by Beethoven and was accompanied by Miss Marguerite Klinker, who played the bridal chorus from Lohengrin as the wedding party entered down the long stairway and thru the isle which was formed of white ribbons held by eight Kappa Alpha Theta sorority sisters of the bride, Miss Ruth Atkinson, Miss Blanch Strader, Miss Sarah Towne, Lincoln; Miss Ruth Miller, Omaha; Miss Julia Graves, St. Paul, Minn.; Miss Roberta Spain, Lee Summit, Mo.; Miss Helen Griess, Harvard and Miss Burdette Taylor, St. Paul. The bride's only attendant, Mrs. Silas Bryan of Minneapolis, entered first. She wore a gown of blue chiffon, harmonizing in shade with the profusion of blue larkspur which was used thruout the rooms. She carried an arm bouquet of Columbia roses and maiden hair fern. The bride entered with her father, who gave her in marriage. She was charming in a youthful gown of white French lace trimmed in pearls. It was fashioned with a soft blouse and tiered skirt with an imported girdle of pearls and rhinestones. Her long veil of tulle was arranged with a high fan shaped headdress, held in place with a narrow band of pearls across the forehead. She carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses, swansonia and maidenhair fern. The marriage vows were exchanged before a prie dieu of white satin and lace arranged before the fireplace in the living room. Carl Harnsberger of Ashland, served as best man for his brother. "Melodie" by Rachmaninoff was played during the service. Mrs. Bryan wore a gown of cream lace over apricot georgette. An informal reception followed the ceremony. Assisting as hostesses about the receiving rooms were Mrs. Leroy Spangler, Mrs. Charles Branch, Mrs. Olive Watson, Mrs. E. H. Barbour, Mrs. John B. Wright and Mrs. E. J. Burkett. A large silver basket of pink roses and spring blossoms combined with the larkspur and four tall white tapers in silver sticks formed the decorations on the table in the dining room. During the first hour Mrs. E. A. George was in charge of the dining room and Mrs. Thomas Roope and Mrs. Ira Atkinson presided at the table. They were assisted in serving by Miss Katherine Young, Miss Grace Elizabeth Evans, Miss Annis Robbins, Miss Jewel Hurlburt and Miss Zella Roope. Mrs. N. H. Gardner was in charge of the dining room the second hour, and Mrs. Dan Derjer and Mrs. Vance Traphagen presided at the table. Assisting in serving were the Misses Ruth Atkinson, Ruth Miller, Julia Graves, Roberta Spain, Blanch Strader, Helen Griess, Sarah Towne and Burdette Taylor. Mrs. George Hall and Miss Gertrude Jones were in charge of the gift room. Mr. Harnsberger and his bride have departed for a short wedding trip and will return to make their home in Ashland, where Mr. Harnsberger is in the banking business. The bride's going away costume was a three piece suit of midnight blue charmeen. The dress was combined with crepe Elizabeth and had an imported collar which had been brought by Mr. Harnsberger from France. The jacket was trimmed with appliqued black satin and she wore a small black hat to match. Mrs. Harnsberger has always attended the Lincoln schools, being a graduate of Lincoln high school and a member of Kappa Theta at the University of Nebraska. Mr. Harnsberger is also a former university man and a member of Phi Kappa Psi.

A Wednesday evening wedding was that of Miss Hazel Poe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Poe, and Elbert G. Brown, which took place at the Vine Congregational church at 8 o'clock. The bride wore a gown of white beaded georgette over satin trimmed with ornaments of pearl and crystal. He veil of tulle was held in place by a headband of pearls and crystals. Her maid of honor, Miss Lillian Borovicka, wore beaded orchid georgette over satin with a hat of orchid georgette. Her flowers were Ophelia roses. Two little flower girls, Enid Virginia Poe, sister of the bride, and Helen Hitchcock, niece of the groom, wore dresses of white chiffon trimmed in tiny ruffles of the material with sashes of orchid and pink tulle. Majorie Thompson, the ring bearer, dressed in pink organdy trimmed in ruffles, carried the rings on a white satin cushion. Glenn Kandall attended Mr. Brown as best man. Ushers were Robert Eastwood and Earl Drath. Mrs. A. G. Chapman at the organ played "Nocturne" and "Meditation in D Flat" preceding the ceremony. Lohengrin's wedding march was used for the processional and Mendelsson's march for the recessional. Mrs. Mary Livingston sang two numbers, "The Sweetest Story Every Told" and "I Love You Truly." Rev. M. A. Bullock officiated. An informal reception in the church parlors followed the ceremony, for which Mrs. Florence S. Gibbons, cousin of the bride, invited the guests to the reception room. Mrs. L. W. Thompson, Mrs. E. W. Drath, Miss Minna Shimmelle and Miss Vera Brown assisted in serving ices and cakes, which were in pink, white and lavender. Miss Marcia Stanton was in charge of the guest book. Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Thompson and children of Geneva; Mrs. Minna Poe Shimmelle of Kansas City; Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hitchcock and children, and Mrs. J. D. Mulvane of Raymond; Mrs. T. Spuie and gandson, Bobby, of Burlington, Ia.

The marriage of Miss Abbie Keiser of Ashland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Keiser to George Zwink of Loup City took place at 8 o'clock Wednesday morning at the Methodist church at Ashland in the presence of fifty relatives and friends. Rev. Samuel Keiser, uncle of the bride officiated, assisted by Rev. Mr. Wallis. Miss Clarice Tobias of Sargent attended as maid of honor and the Misses Katherine Keiser, Della Larson and Wilma Cook acted as bridesmaids. Carlton Zink of Murdock served as best man. Dorothea Rogers, niece of the bride was the little flower girl and Wayne Rogers carried the ring. Preceding the ceremony Miss Gladys Reber of Elmwood sang "Because" and "At Dawning" accompanied at the piano by Miss Luella Craig. The bride wore a gown of white georgette and Spanish lace and a veil of tulle which was held in place with a band of pearls. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Zwink left for a short trip to Chicago and Lansing, Mich., after which they will make their home in Loup City. Mrs. Zwink has attended Nebraska Wseleyan where she is a member of Delta Phi sorority.

The marriage of Miss Maurine E. Walrath and Fred W. Schumann was solemnized at the First Presbyterian church of Osceola Monday. Rev.

YOU POOR KID, WHY ARE YOU SO SKINNY?

Don't your mother know that Cod Liver Oil will put pounds of good healthy flesh on your bones in just a few weeks?

Tell her every druggist has it in sugar-coated tablet form now so that you won't have to take the nasty, fishy-tasting oil that is apt to upset the stomach.

Tell her that McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets are chock-full of vitamines and are the greatest flesh producers and health builders she can find.

One sickly, thin kid, aged 9, gained 12 pounds in 7 months.

She must ask Harley Drug Co., Piller's Pharmacy, Terminal Drug Co., or any good druggist for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets—60 tablets, 60 cents—as pleasant to take as candy.

Thomas E. Barr, pastor of the church, officiated. A reception was held in the church parlors following the wedding and Mr. and Mrs. Schumann departed for a few days wedding trip to Colorado Springs and other resorts of the west. Miss Maurine Dahlberg was bridesmaid. Miss Geralyn Walrath, sister of the bride, maid of honor, and William Raymond Kepner best man. For two years the bride was a resident of Omaha and a student of Loretta DeLone in harp music. Later she has been finishing her harp studies under Professor Schmidt, of the university school of music at Lincoln.

Madame DeVilmar and Prof. Jean Schaefer entertained the members of their summer music class at an informal party Wednesday evening at their home, 1975 A. Roses were used thruout the house for decoration and a pink and white color note was followed in the appointments of the refershments which were served late in the evening. The program consisted of a contralto solo by Esther Cook, reading and dance of the nymphs, Sylvia DeVilmar Schaefer; violin solo, Meredith Thoms; tenor solo, Carl Schaefer; reading, Ruth Bollen; musical readings and duets, Ruth Bollen and Carl Schaefer. Games were played after the program and Virginia reel closed the evening's entertainment.

Miss Annie L. Miller, who is spending several weeks on the west coast, writes that she is spending some of her time with Mrs. James T. Lees at Coronado and Mrs. John Doane at San Diego. Miss Miller went out with other club women who attended the national convention at Los Angeles. She will return to Lincoln June 25.

Mrs. M. Costello and family and Misses Mary, Lydia, and Agnes Weckbach of Lincoln and Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Booth of College View, attended the Guthmann family reunion at Plattsmouth Sunday. A picnic luncheon was served on the lawn of the Guthmann home to seventy-five members of the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Sizer of Lincoln, who have been at Corpus Christi, Tex., and for a time visiting their daughter, Mrs. Fred Hurd and family at Council Bluffs, left yesterday for Chicago. After a short stay there they will go to Colorado for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Hedge are guests at the King Edward hotel during the international Rotary convention, now being held in Toronto, Canaday.

Announcements have been received of the marriage of Miss Katherin Prosser to Paul A. Stout. The wedding took place June 6 at Vertigree. Both are graduates of the University of Nebraska.

Chancellor and Mrs. S. R. Avery are located in a cabin on Lake Minnewawa near MacGregor, Minn., where they will be until the latter part of July. They made the trip by auto, leaving Lincoln Friday and arriving at MacGregor Monday.

Mrs. Leonard Flansburg entertained members of her card club at a bridge luncheon at the Country club Wednesday afternoon. Peonies were used as the centerpiece at a table at which places were arranged for sixteen.

Miss Clarissa Flansburg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Flansburg has gone east to spend the summer with her grandmother, Mrs. E. M. Westervelt, at the Thousand Isles.

BANK CASES NEXT ON LIST

State Will Be in Federal Court Next Monday to Defend Assessments.

Tax Commissioner Smith has been notified that the federal court in Omaha will take up Monday next, the case brought by the national bank of the state to secure a readjustment o ftheir 1923 taxes. The intangible tax law is at the basis of this litigation. It levies a 25 per cent tax on money and the act of congress originally prohibited the taxing of national banks at any high rate than private owners of money. Under this condition of affairs the state and national banks paid only on a fourth basis, after the courts had so decided for 1922.

Later congress amended the law, the object being to make clear that private investment of citizens should not be regarded as moneyed capital, but the banks insist that this does not cure the defect or remove the discrimination.

George W. Ayres, assistant attorney general, will represent the state. He has agreed to a stipulation of certain facts to save time, and this as presented by the other side calls into question the status of building and loan associations.

The decision in the federal coutr will govern the result of the case instituted in the state courts by the state banks.

Reconstruction is Only Hope For Solons, Clarke Says

HAMILTON GOES TO DES MOINES IN SWAP

Harold Chavez, Portuguese Infielder, Comes to Lincoln in Trade—Cuyler Reports Here Saturday.

"As I see it the Lincoln club is shot. The only salvation is reconstruction from top to bottom."

Those were Josh Clarke's words after the double defeat of Wednesday. The new manager of the Solons has watched Lincoln in action for several days and he is old enough in the game of baseball to know that to win ball games he must change the combination.

One deal was announced Thursday morning which, it is believed, will help both Des Moines and Lincoln, the only two clubs in the league which have lost more games than they have won.

Hamilton Goes to Des Moines.

Bill Hamilton, Lincoln shortstop, goes to Des Moines in exchange for Harold Chavez, a Portuguese infielder, whose fielding has entitled him to several pairs of castonets and whose hitting has been improving steadily.

The only reason Lee Keyser, Des Moines owner, wanted to get rid of Chavez is because he cannot play him in his regular position—shortstop—and Chavez seems unable to get used to any other. Flashkamper, Des Moines shortstop, is with the Boosters on option under the terms of which he must be played at short.

Chavez is a youngster and is the property of the Vernon club of the Pacific coast league.

Bill Hamilton has appealed to both Johnny Corriden and Keyser for some time and they wanted him.

Hamilton has always given his best efforts but it has been known that he wanted to make a move.

Change in Starting Time.

Secretary C. N. Moon announced a change in the starting time of all games remaining on the home schedule. All week-day games, excepting Saturday, will start at 3:30, while the games of Saturday and Sunday will get under way at 3. All doubleheaders start at 2 p. m.

This gives the fan more of a chance to get home in time for his evening meal, the management believes.

Magnate Keyser put in a word for Josh Clarke.

"The fans of Lincoln surely ought to give Josh a fair chance before they start wolfing. He has had the club exactly two days and naturally has not had time to get strengthening talent here. I know exactly how it is. They've got me going down alleys in Des Moines. Some of them even go so far as to send me anonymous letters, threatening such-and-such unless we win some ball games."

Clarke announced that Cuyler, outfielder, will report here Saturday.

TRI-STATE LEAGUE

Norfolk Loses to Canaries.

NORFOLK, Neb., June 19.—The Elkhorns failed to give their new pitcher, Zweifel, the support he deserved and the Sioux Falls sluggers beat Norfolk, 7 to 5 Wednesday. Ulrich was jerked in the sixth when the Elkhorns started a rally, getting five hits which cost four scores. Zweifel comes to Norfolk from the Peoria Three-I league and Wednesday's was his first game in the Tri-State.

Knot-Holers Present At Wednesday's Game

The first appearance of the Knothole club at Landis field Wednesday found several hundred boys between nine and fourteen taking advantage of the Lincoln management's offer to admit them free to all week-day games, including Saturday. The boys must carry a ticket however. Instructions for obtaining these can be obtained at the Y. M. C. A.

A. S. Dougall, founder of the Knothole club here, was cheered by the boys along with the Lincoln management between games Wednesday.

Special bleacher seats have been installed north of the grand stand. These have been tested and reported safe.

One of the rules which will disqualify a member is misbehavior. Mr. Dougall stated that the demeanor of the boys Wednesday was all that could be desired.

The Knothelers will be able to see forty free games between now and August 31. Their tickets are not good on Sundays and holidays.

Women's Golf Meet Down to Semi-finals

OMAHA, June 19.—Play in women's golf championship went into the semi-finals round today. Mrs. Russell Fowles, North Platte, was pitted against Mrs. W. G. Silver, while Mrs. Mark Levings, Omaha, meets Mrs. John Redick, wife of the men's champion.

Next Tourney Comes Here.

OMAHA, June 19.—Lincoln Country club will be the scene of the 1925 Nebraska women's state championship golf tournament it was decided at the seventh annual business meeting held at the Omaha Country club, Wednesday.

A Lincoln woman, Mrs. Ross P. Curtice was elected president of the association, and two other Lincoln women, Mrs. C. F. Schwartz and Mrs. Ray Elliott, were named secretary and treasurer, respectively.

The date for the 1925 tourney will be set later.

The members of the Nebraska association are contemplating joining the Missouri valley golf association an organization composed of women golfers from Iowa, Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska.

Fremont Prepares For Golf Tourney

FREMONT, Neb., June 19.—Plans are being prepared for the entertainment of the 150 golfers expected to be in attendance at the annual Fremont Country club golf tournament to be held July 14, 15, 16 and 17.

Cass Marten, local pro, declares that the Fremont course is as near perfect as man, ably aided and abetted by Mother Nature, can make it. The Fremont club has the enviable reputation of staging some of the best tournaments that latter years have brought out. Many of the best out-state golfers have already signified their intention of attending.

CHICAGO GOLFERS WIN TITLE.

CHICAGO, June 19.—University of Chicago golfers won the team championship of the Big Ten conference at the Briergate club here yesterday. Michigan taking second and Illinois third. Wisconsin, Northwestern and Iowa finished in the order named, and were the only other schools represented by full teams.

NEBRASKA CITY IS VICTORY.

NEBRASKA CITY, June 19.—For the first time this season the strong Tarkio, Mo. baseball team was defeated in that city when the Nebraska City nine smothered the Missourians 11 to 5 in a fast game. Features of the game were the pitching of Saal for the home team and the catching of Donaldson and Hebert.

SOLONS DROP PAIR TO DES MOINES CLUB

First is Pitcher's Battle But Second Develops Batting Bee With Boosters Hitting in All Directions.

Des Moines won both games of a doubleheader Wednesday taking the first 2 to 1 and the second 11 to 7. The first developed an old-time pitchers' duel with Ben Grover getting the best of the figures but Lefty Wilson getting the decision.

Grover let the Boosters down with six hits while the Solons found Wilson for nine but the diminutive left-hander kept them well sprinkled, permitting but two in one cluster and they didn't mean anything.

Lincoln scored first when McLarry dropped a throw from Flashkamper and Hamilton was safe as the first man up in the second. McDonald followed with a single to right, Hamilton going to second. After McDaniel had flied to left, Hamilton and McDonald worked a double steal, Hamilton scoring on Crandall's long fly to left.

Bodie Gets Home Run.

Frank Bodie then demonstrated why he spent several years in the majors by riding one of Grover's best offerings out of the park for a home run. That knotted the count.

The Boosters got over with the winning run in the sixth when Caffey dropped Flashkamper's fly and the Des Moines shortstop pulled up at second. Skinner sent him along a peg with a bunt and Burke singled sharply to left, scoring Flashkamper.

The Solons had an excellent chance to tie it up in their share of the same frame. Snyder led off with a single to left. Hamilton sacrificed, Snyder going to second. McDonald singled to center, Snyder laying back believing Skinner could catch it. He could have crossed if he had kept coming.

McDaniel, next man up, grounded to Flashkamper who, when he saw Snyder was not attempting to get home, started a double play which retired the side. The Solons made another bid for runs in the eighth when Moore doubled and Gunther singled but a double play nipped the rally.

In the second game Keck started the proceedings for the Boosters and Art Rasmussen for Lincoln. The Boosters smeared base hits all over the lot in their share of the third and got in four runs before it was over.

Lincoln had scored in the second on Chavez' error. Hamilton's sacrifice and McDaniel's single. In the fourth Hamilton lived on another one of Chavez' four wild throws to first and McDonald singled. Chili McDaniel got back into his old form and lammped one out of the park, scoring Hamilton. McDonald and himself. Johnny Corriden jerked Keck, sending House in. That knotted the count.

Plaster More Base Hits.

In the fifth the Boosters went wild once more and laid down another barrage of base hits. After five consecutive singles, Clarke pulled Rasmussen and injected Dudley. Wheat broke him in with a single and Chavez cleaned the sacks with a triple to right. Before that frame ended Des Moines had six more runs. The Boosters added three more before the game was over on home runs by Bodie, Burke and Flashkamper.

House had no control and his wildness caused him to be removed and Art Stokes took a turn on the slab. He was wild also but with the lead the Boosters piled up he had plenty of leeway and pitched close enough to his belt buckle to keep out of danger.

The same two clubs play Thursday in the last game of the series, starting at 3:30. Score, first game:

Wightman Cup Goes To English Women

WIMBLEDON, Eng., June 19.—Britain's women tennis players won the Wightman cup from America today when Helen Willis, American champion lost to little Miss McKane of England in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2.

The match was the deciding one of seven which are always played in competition for this trophy. Great Britain won all three that were played yesterday.

Defeat of the California girl was not unexpected in view of her poor showing yesterday.

One hopeful sign was the improvement in Miss Wills' service. She was getting her first service in repeatedly, with tremendous pace. At the end she had tired visibly and was unable to cover much ground. The point score in the two sets follows:

First set—
McKane	4*4	4*1	7*4-2*-6
Wills	1*2	2*4	5*2-4*-2
Second set—
McKane	4*1	6*4	0*4-3*-6
Wills	2*4	4*0	4*2-5*-2

WIMBLEDON, Eng., June 19.—"Helen Willis will be the better in the Wimbledon tournament and in the Olympics as a result of her defeat yesterday," Julian T. Myrick said today as the American women's tennis team, facing a tremendous handicap, prepared for the final Wightman cup matches, in which they must make a clean sweep to retain the trophy.

"I think Miss Willis will play without being under such a great strain, how she has been beaten," Myrick ventured.

A light rain during the night made the courts for today's matches faster than ever. The experts were predicting that America might win the doubles in which Mrs. Wightman and Miss Willis were pitted against Miss McKane and Miss Colyer.

Brazil Enters Few Athletes at Paris

SAO PAULO, Brazil, June 19.—Brazil will be represented at the olympic games this year as the result of the hard work and enterprise of the American athletic instructor and trainer of the Paulistano athletic club of this city, Alexander J. Hogarty, who came to Brazil several years ago.

Early this year it was announced in Rio de Janeiro that Brazil would send no team to represent her in the Olmpic games and the various Rio Athletic clubs declined to start a campaign for funds to be used in sending a team to Paris.

It has been Hogarty's ambition to take a team to the olympic for several years and in a letter to the United Press, he announces that he is taking a team over on the "Orania."

The money is being put up by Sao Paulo sportsmen and capitalists. A recent acquisition to the team is A. J. Byington of Harvard, who lives in Sao Paulo and who will run the high hurdles for the Brazilians, having recently arrived from the States on his vacation. Byington will manage the Brazilian aggregation and Hogarty will go along as coach.

A FEW ON THE CUFF

Frank (Ping) Bodie was the boy with the blasting bludgeon. In the first game he got a single, a home run, and was hit by a pitched ball, in four appearances. In the second he got three singles, one of which was scratched, a home run and fanned in five times at the plate. Besides his hitting he was covering his territory in great shape.

Josh Clarke, new manager of the Solons, was on the firing line in uniform.

Chavez, Des Moines third baseman, had four errors charged to him in the second game. He is playing out of position and seems unable to get the head for a throw to first from third. His position is the short field. He made one stop that was a darby but threw the ball away.

Rasmussen made the first four assists of the second game. Art seemed without his usual power and the Boosters fed royally on his offerings. Dudley had trouble all the time he was pitching.

Gormer Wilson, the left hander, who turned back the Solons in the game, undoubtedly looked out on a world thru rose-tinted spectacles after his sour experience here the last time Des Moines played at Landis field. Wilson started three times in the series and got knocked off as regularly as he appeared. He belonged to the New York Yankees for three years, being with Sioux City last year.

Yankees Lead Is Precarious One

NEW YORK, June 19.—American league battle grounds shift eastward today, while the western invasion in the National is practically at an end. The Yankees who lost eight games and won but seven on their western swing maintain a precarious lead in the American race with the hard hitting Tigers pressing them.

In the Nationals circuit the Giants faltered up their average at the expense of the Cardinals. McGraw's men won their last five games. Brooklyn did well against the invaders, while the Cubs showed flashes of great ball in the east.

Rogers Hornsby of the Cards is leading the batters in the older league, with an average of .393, while Archdeacon, Cobb, Jamieson, Ruhl and McNulty have passed Heilmann in the American league batting race. Archdeacon's average for 34 games is .367. Cobb's for 57 games, .364.

FIGHTS AND FIGHTERS

New York — Quintin Romero, Chilean heavyweight champion, won a decision from Joe Stoessel, former amateur champion, in ten rounds of harmless fighting at the New York Velodrome.

LATEST MARKETS

CHICAGO, June 19.--Upward movement of grains continued at the start of business on the board of trade today. Bull elements continued active in wheat and sent values into new high territory on the crop. Influential buying was induced by sharp advances in both the Argentine and Liverpool markets.

Corn's fractional gain was sympathetic. Trading was light.

Oats was governed by other grains and opened fractionally higher.

Provisions got away to a steady start.

Grain Market Opinions.

Chicago Tribune: Traders last night were regarded as holding little wheat, having taken profits. They try to buy it back and a sharp advance will result.

It is said that a bull pool with $20,000,000 behind, composed of Wall street men with one of the largest cotton and stock operators at its head is operating in grains and will continue for some time.

Prices have advanced rather fast the last two days, which makes it few professionals go slow on the buying side. The advance has created a much better feeling all around and has brought a more even adjustment, better grain and commodities values.

Foreigners have bought millions of bu. of wheat futures of late, according to a local exporter. He believes that when the new crop moves the futures will be exchanged for the cash grain and the trade will finally discover that an extremely large, business has been put thru in this manner.

There is likely to be a period of several months commencing some time in August when the United States will practically be the only exporting country with wheat available in quantity according to one of the best informed cash handlers.

Houses with foreign connections have been buying lard for several days. One of the best informed specialists says lard will sell higher and calls attention to the poor quality of hogs being received.

In some quarters the belief is expressed that the trade is ignoring the betterment in the spring wheat crop outlook and may be surprised at the material increase in the prospective yield in the government July report unless the unexpected happens.

Cash corn yesterday at St. L. sold at 92 cents. Old corn traders are disposed to sell the December delivery on all bulges. The leading local bulls and several operators were credited with taking profits in July yesterday.

The east was after cash corn but bids were below a working basis. While there is nothing in the crop reports to cause aggressive buying in oats, prices for the deferred deliveries are regarded as too low when compared with corn.

Export demand: Export sales around 500,000; Minneapolis sold $20,000 rye abroad.

Herald Examiner: Support seems to come from every direction and ever present on the reactions. The world's situation looks stronger than for months. Early weather forecast indicates unsettled; showers and cooler.

Journal of Commerce: Many traders went out of their wheat yesterday and are awaiting a dip on which to buy again. Eve has not Draw started the active speculative interest that it should, in view of world conditions.

The Rosenbaum Grain Corporation issued a comparison of foreign exchange values that showed on the present basis of exchange in France, Belgium and Italy are paying much more for wheat than they paid before the war when normal exchange rates obtained.--Lamson.

LeCount's Report.

GREA TBEND, Kas., June 19.—From Hays here wheat prospects greatly improved since June 1. Much acreage above average crop filling good. Earliest fields this territory in dough. Some moisture would be beneficial, but heavy rains would cause more damage than good. Weather hot, forcing maturity, but has not damaged wheat I have seen. Oats and barley in western Kansas very poor.—Lamson.

Wall Street Journal Review.

NEW YORK, June 19.—Outstanding strength in the rail list developed in the early trading under stimulus of an increase of 90,805 cars in freight loadings for the week ended June 7. This gain demonstrated that traffic was holding up in a fashion which indicated that earnings this year would make a satisfactory comparison with last year's highly gratifying results. Nickel Plate went into new high ground for the year at 88¾ and Chesapeake & Ohio at 81¾, while Southern Pacific duplicated the year's high at 93¾.

But Small Dent Made by Most.

But small dent is made on the surface of the earth by most of us. A poet in the Denver News feelingly sings:

> Scarce you climb a day
> With no sense of pain,
> Then we know
> You were ever on earth?

But on the other hand, suppose you should die with complete record of birth left in the statistics department somewhere, still how would we know you were ever on earth? Probably we would never discover the fact. It is not a somewhat painful thought? Or is it of no particular consequence?

One of the ways to leave some small dent on the planet is to continue to live well beyond the 100-year period. In the Northwest News last week, Aunt Nancy O'Brien of Osseo, Wis., achieved what was almost a "scare head" in the newspapers by celebrating her 105th birthday. She weighs but 81 pounds, but every pound counts. Aunt Nancy says that every one of her birthdays now is the greatest day she ever had. The people turn out to greet her.

Medical annals have recorded so rare a case of longevity as that of Catherine Rush, who died in Philadelphia on May 1, 1817, at the age of 111 years and 11 months. She had lived on the outskirts of Philadelphia all her life, and no one was particularly interested in her until she reached the age of 100. She seemed to grow stronger with age, having been a very frail girl. When she passed the 100-year mark physicians began to watch her. They kept up their watch for nearly 12 years.

There is, then, one rather harmless way of attracting general attention—just keep a-going long enough, and people will begin to turn their heads to look at you.

Doctor Lefora of Buenos Aires has been specializing in old age and attempting to discover its secret. He says in the Revista Argentina that Professor Lorand and his followers are convinced that old age is a natural phrase in the great cycle of human life and that it is due to a perfectly normal weakening of all cells in the human body.

But Doctor Lafora says that it is very probable that injuries in the brain are not the cause of old age symptoms, but are rather the result of an intoxication of the brain cells which determines the beginning of old age. He asks, "Is it possible to restore youth to the brain cells and to the human body as a whole? Science has not yet been able to give a satisfactory answer to this question.

So that is all you will get out of that. If it is any help, take it. You are welcome. No extra charge.

Thirty-five Years to Live.

We have been considering for some time the offering of a literary prize of $1.50 for the best essay on the subject, "What Would I Do if I Had Only Thirty-five More Years to Live?" After a half century on the top of this planet, one should, presumably know how to make the next thirty-five circles of the old planet around the sun bright and glorious indeed. Unfortunately, wisdom does not necessarily come with years and the old bird of fifty or sixty summers is just as likely to take the duck pass between the lakes, after he has been shot at in this very spot year in and year out, as is the young thing hardly yet out of pin feathers.

But this flower should be laid at the foot of the statue of the old bird above mentioned—that after having stopped a not-quite-fatal charge of small shot, late in life, he is more likely to settle under the sorrowful tree, think the matter out a little further, and acknowledge that he is indeed the double donkey of fame than is the young pinefeather thing who is traversing the primrose duck pass before mentioned for the first time or two.

This sorrowful tree, as described by Dr. Gregory, blooms in far away Persia, the land of the citron and the almond. It is so called from the fact that it blossoms only at night. During the day it is just an ordinary bush, but as the first star appears in the heavens and the nightingale's liquid melody mingles with the perfume of the flowers, this common bush begins to lift its head, and as the shades of night fall thicker and thicker, and the great blue heavens overhead are studded with stars, the sorrowful tree blossoms into a thing of beauty.

It has had the gracious light and has neglected it. It sits grumpily in its native forest and refuses every inducement of the other plants to look up. Finally the orb of day (reference here being made to the common sun) slowly withdraws itself. Inkiness spreads over the landscape. Then the sorrowful plant awakens to the fact that it has neglected the gracious opportunity to hang out its flowers and it bestirs itself and blossoms while it may. Put that down to its credit!

Under the sorrowful tree sit those who have neglected their chances of doing a genteel bloom while their sun was yet high. But if they are able to take a lesson from the tree above them, they may still make use of their twilight and night to hang out all kinds of sweet-smelling blossoms on themselves.

So I say that we old birds, those of us who have only thirty-five to forty-five or fifty years more to go, may, if we elect to take a lesson from the sorrowful tree, hang out a lot of bloom in the important years that yet remain.

I might as well confess right here that, if I thought I had only about thirty-five more years to live, I should be tolerably scared. But it seems impossible for the cheerful old duck to get it out of the hunk of putty just back and a little above his bill (that hunk of putty that he does his thinking with) that he is not going right on indefinitely He is just as entirely unable to envisage the thought of death as he was a half century ago, when he was just coming out of pin feathers and be coming a regular bird. It might "get" the other birds— this chance charge of shot—but it could never get him That was a laughable impossibility. So he frivols along thru life as gay and as glorious as father with the family in Europe for the summer.

At the end of the thirty-five or fifty, or seventy-five or more years that remain, I ask no better passage hence than that made by Brownie, the canary. Probably Brownie never knew that he had pecked his last bird seed and that the end of singing had come for him. He merely knew that something in the canary-works was very wrong indeed. He could not sing, he could not even nibble at the offered bit of sugar, his wings trailed down in a strange, unaccustomed manner, and it was only with difficulty during the day that he kept his perch at all. But as night fell, after several pitiful struggles, he was able to tuck his head under his wing. When I saw that, I thought that he would perhaps go till morning. But in the morning he was in the bottom of his cage, feathers all strangely ruffled, wings relaxed, and his little feet, that had so long carried him so cavalierly, stuck straight up into the air.

There were tears shed in our house that day.

Zeal Not According to Knowledge.

Boston Transcript: In New Hampshire the state highway department has begun removing the "booster" signs along the highway within a radius of fifty miles from Concord. At the same time it made known that hereafter advertising signs along the state highways must be placed outside the limits of the right of way and that permission for signs must be obtained from property owners. This step but marches with the conviction that there are too many signs on the highways, that they add nothing to the landscapes, rather harming it, and that the country as such should be let alone, at least in this respect. It is a conviction that the common sense of the people at large thruout the United States has adopted and is now a settled policy.

This policy bring up another question as to the degree of benefit that the "booster" sign does to a city or town. None will doubt the uses of advertisement, but this "boosting" is not quite that. It seems to be something more in the shape of an appeal to the public quickly to adopt a point of view that, friendly tho the visiting or touring public may be, may not seem necessary or even possible. Many of us have seen a sign suspended over the highway a distance out of some pleasant city or set up by the roadside. "You are now leaving Thermopylae" or it may be Toonerville, and have thereby not much been moved. There are some, on the other hand, who love boosting and boosters. To these, perhaps, such signs are cheering medicine, appealing to a common instinct of enthusiasm, and enthusiasm is a very good thing. This is an intricate matter, but settled by the admission that boosting would not be done unless it had results, but the fact remains that many a visitor's interest and speculation are aroused more by the sight of a comely old house or a prosperous factory or a neat and effective street of business houses than by the paint and board declaration that these exist.

It is plain that the New Hampshire highway department regards the larger matter of the seemly preservation of the highways as a duty imposed on it by law and as a general aid to the whole state and individually to the municipalities within it. It sees also that limits in the premises once decreed, must be preserved as intended, for otherwise the highway signs would become a nuisance, even in the good cause of "boosting" a place that all esteemed.

A New Sport in Kansas.

Clay Center Kansas Times: If you want to get a thing across you have got to arouse the sporting instinct, which everybody possesses to a more or less degree. That has been demonstrated in the contest which has been going on between the Sunday schools of the Presbyterian churches of Clay Center and Concordia. If men had simply been asked to go to Sunday school mighty few would have gone. But when they were asked if they were going to let the kind of gang which inhabits Concordia beat them, that was a different matter. Why, fellows even stayed away from the golf grounds Sunday morning until after 11 o'clock, in order to go to the Presbyterian Sunday school. The result was an attendance of about five hundred in face of the fact that a bunch of Belleville golf sharks were in town for the day. Fellows who hardly knew whether they used saxophones or a calliope for Sunday school music, were in attendance. And they say they are going to give Concordia a beating next Sunday that Concordia won't soon forget. Atta boy! Ean yah!

MEN AND THINGS

When one observes how easily men who think fool themselves it is not difficult to understand how they may delude others. Here comes an eastern philosopher to assert that the world owes its progress to the lazy men of the past who devised easier ways of doing things so that they might have greater leisure to do nothing. The fallaciousness of this philosophy can be ascertained by just looking around. Do you know of any lazy man who ever invented anything the world needed out of a desire to escape work for himself? The world owes its progress to men who devised easy means of doing things so that they might have energy and time for other accomplishments.

Has Billy Sunday, our most conspicuous blood and thunder revivalist lost heart also? Commenting recently on the Chicago tragedy he declared that the world is headed for hell so fast that no speed limit can possibly have any effect on the result. Considering the number of years of strenuous effort that Mr. Sunday has put in trying to jar people out of their state of sinfulness and his frequently expressed conviction that the average minister is too mealy-mouthed about dealing with the scornful, this would seem to be tantamount to saying that neither method is effective. Is he ready to concede this?

We have always inclined to agree with those who contend that suicide is a confession of cowardice. Those who insist that it represents courage because one leaps from troubles with which he is familiar to those he knows not of do not carry conviction. We refer, of course, to those cases where men know what they are doing when they take their own lives. No one travels far along the path that stretches between the cradle and the grave without experiencing at least a fleeting desire to see if the next world offers anything better than this one, but only a small percentage yield to the weakness. The badge of courage is never pinned on a man who refuses to face the consequences of his own acts and tosses his responsibilities onto others' shoulders.

The heavens still continue to fall. Here comes our favorite Nebraska insurgent, W. J. Taylor, who has bombarded the political skies in the past with his objurgations against bossism in politics and his exposition of how the rights of the common man are disregarded by the fellows who meet in back rooms behind darkened curtains and plot out what other people should be made to do, and says that he is willing to leave the writing of the third party platform to LaFollette and to agree in advance to do anything that the Wisconsin senator says ought to be done. But then Mr. Taylor is no less sincere in his opposition to bosses in politics than the rest of us. We are quite willing to be bossed if the bossing is in our interest and runs along the lines of our desires.

A vagrant bit of reading recently brought this advice to women from the pen of a Dr. Gregory, otherwise unidentified, to our discreet attention: "Be cautious even in displaying your good sense. If you happen to have any learning, keep it a profound secret, especially from the men, who generally look with a jealous and malignant eye on a woman of great parts and cultivated understanding." This is the sort of writing that makes us wriggle our typewriter. Men do not generally look with a jealous and a malignant eye upon a woman of culture and good understanding. Then why should anybody set that down as a solemn truth? Good sense is the one thing everybody should be urged to cultivate and exercise. It is the difference between success and failure in all undertakings.

What this world needs mightily is not so much a feeling on the part of a rich man that he is merely the steward of his fortune, and must give an accounting to everybody, as a course of conduct, while he is engaged in making that fortune, that squares with every element of what everyone conceives to be square dealing. One of these elements is whether a man's money has been secured by extortionate practices, in which we include what is popularly known as profiteering. If a man exacts, because he is in a position to do so, a greater reward for what he does for society than this contribution to society entitles him to receive, he is doing an imperishable act. We lay it down as a primary principle that the people generally are a lot more interested in—and it is the measure they employ—how a man makes his fortune than in what he does with it afterwards.

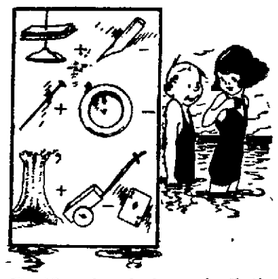
OUR DAILY PUZZLE.

(By Walter Wellman)



He likes her looks and all that, but he wants to know more. Add and subtract the names of the objects, and find one of her traits. What is she?

Answer to last puzzle—SPOOL.

BRAIN TESTS.

(By Sam Loyd)

5 Minutes to Answer This.

A CHARADE.

My first is half my second, just,
Oh, false and traitorous second;
My total bloom is beauty rare,
Purity's emblem reckon'd.

Answer to Yesterday's.

That hill must have been 6 3-4 miles high.

FOREBODINGS.

Forebodings of disaster at times my spirit rack, but I'm resolved to master such dreams, and sanely stack; I buy a mustard plaster and put it on my back. Sometimes I seem to shiver with dread of fortune's kicks; sometimes my heartstrings quiver with fear of fateful tricks; and then I know my liver is missing on all six. Forebodings are as bootless as anything I know; all fatuous and fruitless are harbingers of woe; they'd bother a galoot less if he'd just bid them go. And when a cheap foreboding my breast with terror fills, I head off all its goading by taking Punkman's pills, subdue its fierce corroding with Compound Juice of Squills. When once my works are chooing in good and proper style, presentiments pursuing will miss me by a mile; and I again am viewing the future with a smile. The grisly sign and token of biliousness are born; presentiments unbroken rise from an aching corn; but pills in boxes oaken will laugh such signs to scorn. Forebodings will go reeling when health regains its own; despair will hit the ceiling when flu is overthrown; take pills when you are feeling inclined to wail and groan.

An Unwarranted Assumption.

There can be no such thing as a "perfect crime," comment the criminologists of Wichita on the Leopold-Loeb plan, pointing, however, only to flaws of execution ,not planning. The plot did contain one glaring miscalculation in the section concerned with the delivery of the ransom money. At a certain railroad crossing the father of the murdered boy was to throw open a car window and hurl a package of money from the moving train. But how was the car window to be opened? A plan assuming that the windows of day coaches can be opened at will was palpably academic—Wichita Eagle.
